WHY THIS HUNK WED THIS FATTY

– and why he's not the only gorgeous guy hooking up with a hefty honey!

ULTRA HUNKY Tim Cazell, Mark James and Sean Stone wooed, won and married three of the unsightliest gals on the planet, and now, for the first time ever, the famed male models tell why wild horses couldn't drag them away from their hideous honeys.

If you're on the plain side yourself, be forewarned — their reasons for "going ugly," as Stone puts it, just might stick in your craw.

They didn't marry the gals because they're beautiful on the inside, for their keen intelligence, or for their thoughtful opinions on big issues and world events.

They're simply convinced that homely babes are truer and bluer than hot babes, more eager to please — and wilder in the bedroom.

"I know my ugly girl would be true to me forever and I'd never have to pay her off in a nasty divorce," says Cazell. "She couldn't stray if she wanted to because — let's face it — most guys think she's pretty disgusting. Another thing I like is that she's on the chubby side, which makes her happy and jolly."

"My Plain Jane is a fabulous cook and she worships the ground I walk on," says James. "And she's so thrilled to have won a prize like me, she'll do anything I tell her to do — she even washes my car."

"Ugly girls are better lovers because they're desperate and try harder," adds Stone. "And my lardy lady is so fat, every love session is like a threesome."

If those assessments seem harsh, the ladies the hunks married say they couldn't care less. They swear up and down they're living in bog heaven with their Perfect 10 men.

"When the Good Lord gave out looks I must have been shoveling manure out behind the barn," horse-faced Belinda Stone says in a lively interview at her sprawling waterfront penthouse on Miami's trendy South Beach.

"All my life, people made fun of me. They called me horrible names and they laughed at me behind my back.

MOM DOES HER OWN C-SECTION

A$TOUNDED docs say a Mexican woman delivered her own baby — by doing an emergency Caesarean section on herself!

The 40-year-old woman went into labor with her ninth child and was all alone in her dirt-floor house, which has no electricity or running water, according to a report in the March issue of the International Journal of Gynecology and Obstetrics.

When problems developed, the report says, the woman took a knife and cut into her own stomach and removed the baby. One of her other children ran for a local nurse, who stitched up the incision and got the tough mom and her newborn to a hospital. Both are in good condition.

"She was asked, 'Why did you do that? Do you know that you could have died?' " says Dr. Rafael Valle, a Northwestern University obstetrician who wrote the journal report. "She said, 'Yes, but I wanted to save my baby.'

"This is heroic to me."

SURVEY: SINGLE GALS ARE SANER THAN MARRIED WOMEN

LADIES, you must be nuts to get married — it's a scientific fact!

Researchers at the University of London say single gals are much more emotionally healthy than their married girlfriends. Their mental state also is better than that of women who've broken up with boyfriends, especially if the lovelorn ladies have had a series of broken relationships.

The results of the British Household Panel Survey found that the opposite is true for men. They're better off mentally while they're in a relationship, and they recover from breakups faster than women do.

WWN IS RIGHT — ANGELS DO EXIST

DEAR EDITOR: Your article about the angel that was accidentally shot down in Iraq (April 26, 2004) reminds me of a true incident my Uncle Frank, a retired police officer, once experienced.

Frank had been on the Kansas City police force for only three weeks when he found himself in a very dangerous situation. A psychotic man, armed to the teeth with various guns and rifles, had holed himself up in his house and was randomly firing shots through the front window at passersby. He'd already hit and wounded three people, one fatally, when Frank, responding to a call from a neighbor, arrived on the scene.

Just as Frank pulled up, a young boy, oblivious to what was going on, came running by. Frank instinctively dove out from his police car to grab the boy and get him to safety, and at that moment the madman fired, putting a bullet through Frank's midsection.

Frank says he remembers lying on the ground for a few moments, and then looking up to see a tall, casually dressed man leaning over him. Frank tried to tell the man to run for cover, but the man said, "Don't worry, you and the boy will be all right."

The mysterious stranger then dragged both Frank and the boy to safety, and promptly disappeared.

To this day, Uncle Frank is convinced that his rescuer was an angel, and I'm inclined to believe him! — Lily H., Sheboygan, Wisc.

Dear Editor: In regard to the article about Martha Stewart's prison cell (April 12, 2004), why does the writer have to make so many derogatory remarks about the Elvis wall hanging? Some Elvis fans may well like this sort of painting.

Why doesn't the writer (Nikki Beck) keep her obviously personal opinions about Elvis, his fans, and related memorabilia out of the story?! I resent when a writer seems to think they must refer to Elvis art as tacky and tasteless and disgusting. For that matter, it could be that Martha herself is an Elvis fan too! It's just so heartbreaking for old grandmas like me to hear so many stories these days of unwanted, unplanned, unsupervised, underfed, and under-loved children.

Super tips for a sizzlin' summer!

HOW TO SQUEEZE INTO A BIKINI THAT'S TWO SIZES TOO SMALL

By DARYL BECK
Correspondent

HEY, LADIES — you can squeeze into a bikini that's two sizes too small and save the $100 you'd have to fork out for a new one, with tips from a leading expert.

"It's easy and fun," says beauty expert Shara Zadora.

If you fit the profile of the typical American woman, says Zadora, your swimsuit will be two sizes too small thanks to the 12 to 13 pounds you packed on over the winter.

"All you have to do is gather up a few items that just about everyone has lying around the house — things like a broomstick, a long-handled shoe horn, lard, fatback, butter, a yoga mat, and lots of plastic wrap."

Here, exclusively for Weekly World News, is the Boston-based author's special 5-point plan to help you squeeze into last year's bikini.

1 Start early. Slipping into your too-tense bikini will be much easier if you start the minute you roll out of bed. "Don't forget," says Zadora, "that we've all just a little bit shorter when we awaken in the morning because gravity flattens and repositions fat while we sleep."

2 Work fast. Once up, gather your tools and get to work. Start by greasing yourself with butter, lard, petroleum jelly, fatback or any other lubricant you like.

"When you're fully covered and slippery as an eel," says the expert, "wrap your bottom and breasts with strong plastic wrap in the same way you'd wrap yourself in a towel or a sarong.

"Don't yank it so tight that you cut off circulation and hurt yourself. Snug is good enough. Watch the clock for five minutes, then, with your fat maximally compressed, move on to Step 3."

3 Quickly peel off the plastic wrap and step into your one-piece or pre-tied bikini bottom one foot at a time.

Now, pull the bottom straight up with all the "oomph" you can muster.

With your fat compressed and your lubricant cutting back on resistance, the bikini just might slip right into place.

4 Pull your pre-tied bikini top down over your head and position it over your breasts as completely as you can. Again, fat compression and your lubricant should make the job doable. As with your bikini bottom, if it's not hanging just right, simply move on to Step 5.

5 Wedge your broomstick or a long-handled shoe horn between yourself and your bikini bottom. Once in position, push the stick or shoehorn away from your body. This will gently stretch the bikini, allowing you to position it for full coverage.

Do this as many times and in as many places as necessary to get the right fit.

Then go to work on your top.

"Depending on your body type, it might be

A NEW MEXICO housewife says every time she cooks tortillas, they form the face of National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice!

"What does this mean?" asks dazzled Maria Sanchez Zaragoza, 37. "Are the tortillas trying to tell me something — or is it a miracle?"

Experts who've looked into the case say the tortillas have not been tampered with in any way and the image of Condi is amazingly sharp.

"You could rub these the Holy Shroud of Turin of tortillas — eng[illegible] image, revealing no secrets," says one scientist. "It's very puzzling."

Concerned researchers say the Condi image could be a warning about an impending terrorist attack on the U.S.

"What better image than that of Condoleezza on a humble tortilla to warn us of imminent disaster?" says paranormal investigator Dr. Steph Gassaire of Las Alamos, N.M. "How much clearer a sign could we expect — do we need to see a mushroom cloud on a tortilla before we get the message and act?"

Maria has been making tortillas for years and proudly says that hers are considered the best in the Carlsbad neighborhood where she lives with her husband and four children. But until March 12, no uncanny images had ever emerged on her food.

She recalls: "I was kneading dough for a fresh batch of tortillas when my 8-year-old son Julio came into the kitchen holding one I had made earlier that day and said, 'Mama, look, look, this tortilla looks just like that lady on TV.'

"I took it from him and held it up to the light, ready to laugh — but it really did look like the president's assistant, Miss Condoleezza. It even had those little teeth of hers that stick out like a chipmunk's.

"At first I wasn't worried, but when the next batch came out, every single tortilla looked like her too. I crossed myself and took them right to the priest."

After ascertaining that no devilry was involved, the clergyman contacted university experts, who launched an investigation.

The scientists, who had Maria repeat her tortilla-making process under controlled laboratory conditions, confirm that the housemaker is doing nothing to deliberately shape the outlines of the tortillas.

"The odds against more than 240 tortillas in a row coming out resembling the same individual are astronomical," says one researcher. "The product of chance would be astronomical."

This isn't the first time that unusual images have appeared on tortillas. Over the past 20 years, the faces of many famous celebrities, including Mikhail Gorbachev, Jimmy Hoffa, Mother Teresa and even the Virgin Mary, have reportedly shown up on the traditional Mexican dish.

To the faithful, such manifestations are often taken as signs from God. And in this case, since Dr. Rice is so closely associated with America's war on terror, experts fear it could be a warning from the Almighty.

"Perhaps the choice of the tortilla is a clue that the next terrorist strike will come from Mexico," Dr. Rambler says. "We've contacted the White House to suggest that

WORLD'S FATTEST MAN GOES TO WAR IN IRAQ

TWO-TON patriot Buster Simcus says he's proud to serve the nation that has given him "food on the table and freedom to eat it."

4,028-LB. VET VOWS TO HELP OUR BOYS CRUSH THE TERRORISTS

BLUBBERY Buster the Fat Man has vowed to make Iraq safe for democracy by single-handedly crushing the fanatical thugs, gangs and insurgents who are trying to throw the troubled country into chaos.

And grateful U.S. troops who've been hamstrung in their attempts to find and kill enemies who hide in densely populated cities are sky-high over the appearance of the rotund Rambo in the dangerously unpredictable Iraqi theater.

It isn't the first time 4,028-pound Buster Simcus, 54, has risked his own life to help people in need.

In 2001, the burly Vietnam veteran saved a family from drowning by using his big belly to bump their runaway SUV out of a murky lake.

Before jetting to Baghdad on April 4, armed, friends say, with a Swiss army knife and a pair of pearl-handled .45 caliber revolvers, soft-spoken Simcus bravely vowed to unleash "the wrath of fat" on Iraqi insurgents "so we can win the peace and bring our troops home."

"Enough is enough — I can't take it anymore," the fat man told wife Jeannette Simcus in a cell-phone call from Baghdad before he vanished in a sea of Arabs.

"Somebody has to clean up this mess for Uncle Sam and that somebody is me. I owe it to the country that has given me the two most precious gifts a man can ask for — food on the table and the freedom to eat it."

Neither the Pentagon nor the Department of Defense will discuss Simcus' decision to embark on his unauthorized, one-man crusade in the war-ravaged country.

But insiders admit that behind closed doors, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld and the Pentagon's Gen. Richard Myers are hoping and praying the scale-crunching soldier of fortune will succeed where regular troops and diplomacy have failed.

"Rumsfeld and Myers have been waiting for a Rambo to step up to the edge of Simcus — either that, or they'll condemn him as a vigilante.

"But in private they're high-fiving with some of the highest vertical leaps I've seen since the Supreme Court anointed the 2000 presidential election from Al Gore and gave the White House to George Bush."

It's unclear exactly where Simcus is at this point, although it's certain that he is somewhere in Iraq and on the prowl for insurgents wherever he can find them.

Although big and bulky, he is known to be quick on his feet — and he trained like Rocky in preparation.

"Once Buster decided to risk his life to break through the stalemate in Iraq, he trained with a vengeance," says a friend. "Instead of eating like a sumo, he started eating like two sumos. He dyed his hair black. He grew a long, salt-and-pepper beard. He even wore a bandanna to cover his receding hairline.

"When he finds an insurgent, Buster's going to do one of two things: Blow the bum away with one of his 45s or fling him to the ground and sit on him. Don't laugh. Buster weighs over 4,000 pounds.

"I've seen him pop the shocks on an SUV just climbing into the passenger seat. Can you imagine what that kind of brute power would do to your rib cage — or your skull?"

Simcus' wife, Jeanette, has declined repeated interview requests. But in a statement issued by a family friend, she said she is "proud of Buster and what he hopes to accomplish in Iraq.

"When Buster makes up his mind to do something, he won't stop until the job is finished. I just hope those

I MARRIED AN INFLATABLE DOLL — but divorced her when she sprang a leak!

By MICHAEL CHIRON
Correspondent

QUIRKY Kevin Perlock made headlines back in January when he tied the knot with his inflatable love doll Suzy.

But the weird romance went bust when the blown-up bride sprang a leak — and now her heartbroken hubby is filing for divorce!

Perlock, 39, cited "irreconcilable differences" last week when he filed court papers formally severing his union with his nearly life-size latex wife.

"The worst part was watching Suzy's body — which used to be tight as a drum — sag more and more each day until she looked like a deflated beach ball," says Perlock, of Brisbane, Australia.

"And the hiss of the departing air sounded like she was suffering from chronic flatulence. In restaurants and movie theaters, people would turn and stare at her.

"Finally, I just couldn't take it anymore."

The breakup comes as a surprise to the more than 250 friends and relatives who attended the formal ceremony on January 18.

"Call me a sentimental old fool, but I really thought this one was going to last," says Perlock's aunt, Christine Whitaker.

The record-store employee admits he sent away for the first love doll he saw advertised in a men's magazine out of pure desperation.

"I had caught my last girlfriend in bed with my cousin and I was disillusioned about women in general," he reveals.

"Suzy turned out to be totally different from the two girls I'd dated. She wasn't bossy — she let me be the man and take charge. And of course, I could trust her not to cheat on me."

HEARTBROKEN Kevin Perlock's wedded bliss lasted only as long as the air inside his love doll.

Perlock listed other reasons why his doll was a better partner than a flesh-and-blood female. Among them, she:

- Never complains about you leaving the toilet seat up.
- Isn't squeamish about sexual experimentation.
- Doesn't waste money on expensive clothes.
- Never whines about "looking too fat."
- Doesn't go ballistic if she catches you eyeballing a pretty gal.
- Doesn't insist on long chats about "our relationship."
- Lets you watch sports on TV instead of chick flicks.

Perlock says that working up the courage to pop the question took several weeks.

"I finally did it over a candlelight dinner," he recalls.

Perlock admits his buddies laughed their butts off when he introduced Suzy as his fiancee.

"I realized that they were jealous of what we had and I dumped them as friends," he says.

The honeymoon period was "blissful," according to Perlock. But when Suzy began leaking after an afternoon of snuggling in a piney meadow during a romantic picnic, that took the wind out of their sails.

GONE BUST Kevin and Suzy Perlock, seen here in happier days, went their separate ways after she sprang an embarrassing slow leak.

Perlock tried glue, tape — nothing could stop the leak," he says. After applying to dissolve the creepy marriage, Perlock tearfully dumped his bride in a trash bin. He has since sent away for a replacement, taking advantage of the manufacturer's one-year warranty. But the rubber doll-loving Romeo remains gloomy.

"No one can take the place of Suzy," Perlock says. "I'm beginning to think I'm just not lucky in love."

10 FAULTS THAT MAKE MEN REPULSIVE!

By JAYNE STEMPLE, Correspondent

GUYS — can't get a date? Do women seem to hate you? Maybe it's because you're REPULSIVE!

Behavioral scientists have identified the 10 most common male traits and habits that make women cringe. The more of them you exhibit, the more likely you are to send a gal screaming into the arms of someone who doesn't disgust her.

Here are the signs and how you can change — and score with chicks like never before.

1 YOU STINK. Dousing yourself with cologne after a workout or a hard game of basketball just makes you smell like cologne-scented garbage. Hit the shower.

2 YOU'RE A FAT SLOB. Why do you think the girls at work run to the next room every time you walk by? If you have so much belly hanging over your pants that people are asking you what you're hiding the baby, it's time for a diet — or at least some bigger pants.

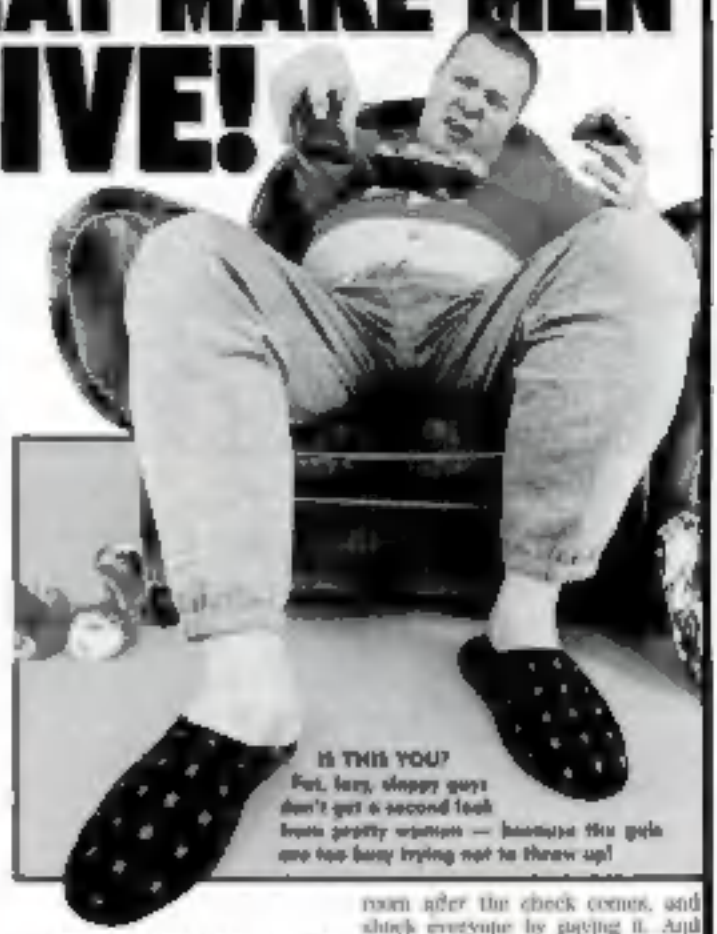
3 YOU SOUND LIKE A BUZZ SAW. No one over age 12 — least of all a pretty girl — is entertained by someone who can burp the Pledge of Allegiance.

4 YOU SCRATCH YOURSELF IN PUBLIC, in places no one wants to know about — much less see. Find a closet. Or, better yet, a nice dark alley.

5 YOU'RE A PIG AT THE POOL. The next time you go swimming in those baggy trunks, remember one word: Jockstrap.

6 YOU TELL CRUDE JOKES, and always at the worst times. Save the limericks about Nantucket for your bar buddies. NOT your grandmother's funeral.

7 YOU HAVE NO MORALS. Maybe the blind guy couldn't tell that you only gave him $1, instead of the $10 you claimed. But everyone else could. Start making amends to all the people you've ripped off, before it's too late.



IS THIS YOU?
Fat, lazy, sloppy guys don't get a second look from pretty women — because the gals are too busy trying not to throw up!

8 YOUR COMB-OVER IS SCARING PEOPLE. Everyone knows you're losing your hair, so stop pretending. At least wear a hat on windy days so that thing on your head doesn't look like it's waving to everyone you meet.

9 YOU'RE CHEAP. Next time you go out to lunch, go to the men's room after the check comes, and chuck everyone by paying it. And don't forget: The bare-minimum tip is 15 percent, not 15 cents.

10 YOU BITE YOUR NAILS. And you spit them into the trash can across the room. Have you ever wondered why no one cheers when you yell, "Two points! The crowd goes wild!" after you make the basket?

MEET THE WORLD'S BRAVEST WORKERS

By STARR SAMSON
Correspondent

THE WORLD'S bravest workers aren't firefighters or cops. They're ordinary men and women who rely on gritty determination and sheer force of will to crawl out of bed every morning and head off to the job in spite of physical and mental challenges that will blow you away.

That's the word from famed corporate headhunter Ralph DeBoise, who says the winners of his 27th annual World's Most Courageous Workers contest include:

They're an inspiration to every man, woman & child in America!

● A legless "human stump" wildlife photographer who specializes in close-up shots of hungry lions. "So far, so good — I haven't been attacked," he says. "If one of them ever lunges, I can always roll over and play dead."

● A shuffling, shaking Parkinson's disease victim who works in a nitroglycerin plant. "If you drop a bottle of nitro it'll blow you to kingdom come," he says. "That's why I wear those little rubber fingertips that secretaries use to sort mail. They help me keep a good grip."

● A lockjaw victim who sits in beaches with his head leaned back — and mouth wide open — counting seagulls for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. "Yeah, they poop a lot," he says. "But for every direct hit, there must be 10 or 12 misses. That gives me hope — and the strength to go on."

● A narcoleptic air courier who falls sound asleep without warning up to 20 times a day while flying rush-rush documents from Washington to New York. "Thank God for my auto pilot," he says. "And so far I don't seem to have any trouble staying awake on take-offs and landings."

● An inspirational speaker who caps his three-day seminars by walking over a bed of hot coals on his flame-licked peg leg. "Inspirational speakers have to walk on hot coals these days. You can't get around it. People expect it," he says. "If my wooden leg catches on fire and I fall, well, I'm not going to be there crying about it. I'll just get up and start hopping."

"That's rare courage," says DeBoise, of Atlanta. "And I urge workers everywhere to remember these people whenever they start thinking their job is too tough and they feel down.

● A 400D lady welder who's allergic to clothes and works nude in a shower of sizzling, popping sparks and flying globs of molten metal. "Yes, I get 'nicked' — but I love my work," she says. "People need wrought iron handrails and I feel like it's up to me to see that they get them."

● A legally blind electrician who rigs giant, high-voltage transformers that he locates with a red-tipped cane. "It's dan-

KIM JONG IL EATS LASSIE!

Dictator turns imprisoned missionaries' hero pooch into a gourmet meal!

By MICHAEL FORSYTH

DESPICABLE despot Kim Jong Il has crossed the line. He's eaten a beautiful and loyal collie just like the one who delighted generations of Americans in the Lassie movies!

Animal rights activists are outraged at reports that the North Korean madman had his guards pound up the 8-year old collie after having her roasters – a pair of Scottish missionaries – arrested on trumped up espionage charges.

"We plan to protest at a delicacy in South Korea and in a country where famine is widespread, peasants can't be blamed for resorting to eating almost anything to survive," says Monica Hausmann of the Geneva-based International Crusade for Humane Treatment of Animals.

"But for a well-fed leader to target a noble creature that has become a symbol of good is sickening. And to prey on the compassion of law-abiding citizens is morally indefensible."

Announcing in a report carried on South Korean radio, the twisted dictator ordered his chefs to turn the helpless pooch, named Maggie, into a gourmet meal fit for a king.

"After the dog's throat was cut it was skinned and butchered, and then the meat was sliced from the bone and diced," the shocking report states with slices of orange on a bed of rice."

Palace sources confirm that Swedish Kim not only enjoyed the stomach-turning meal – he clearly recalled the fact that he was dining on one of the most feted Hollywood canines.

An insider reveals: "After the meal Kim patted his belly, belched and said, 'I guess Lassie won't be receiving any more fan mail.'"

DOG GONE: Ian and Agatha MacGregor say Kim Jong Il, above, pulled them on trumped-up charges so he could make a meal of their beloved collie

Maggie was the beloved pet of Ian and Agatha MacGregor, who were arrested in a police raid on their Pyongyang apartment.

"The charges against us were ridiculous," says Ian, 34. "It was obvious it was a ploy to get hold of Maggie."

The heartbroken MacGregors say that not like the fictional Lassie who first appeared in a 1943 movie, Kim Jong Il and was popularized in countless books and TV shows, Maggie was brave and protective.

"Maggie was a very special animal – she truly was a real-life Lassie," says Agatha, 36. "She travelled the world with us and would alert us to danger. She was our best friend. We were appalled to learn that their beloved pet had been snatched from their

ATHEIST SUES CITIES NAMED AFTER SAINTS

They violate our separation of church & state!

By KATE VASQUEZ

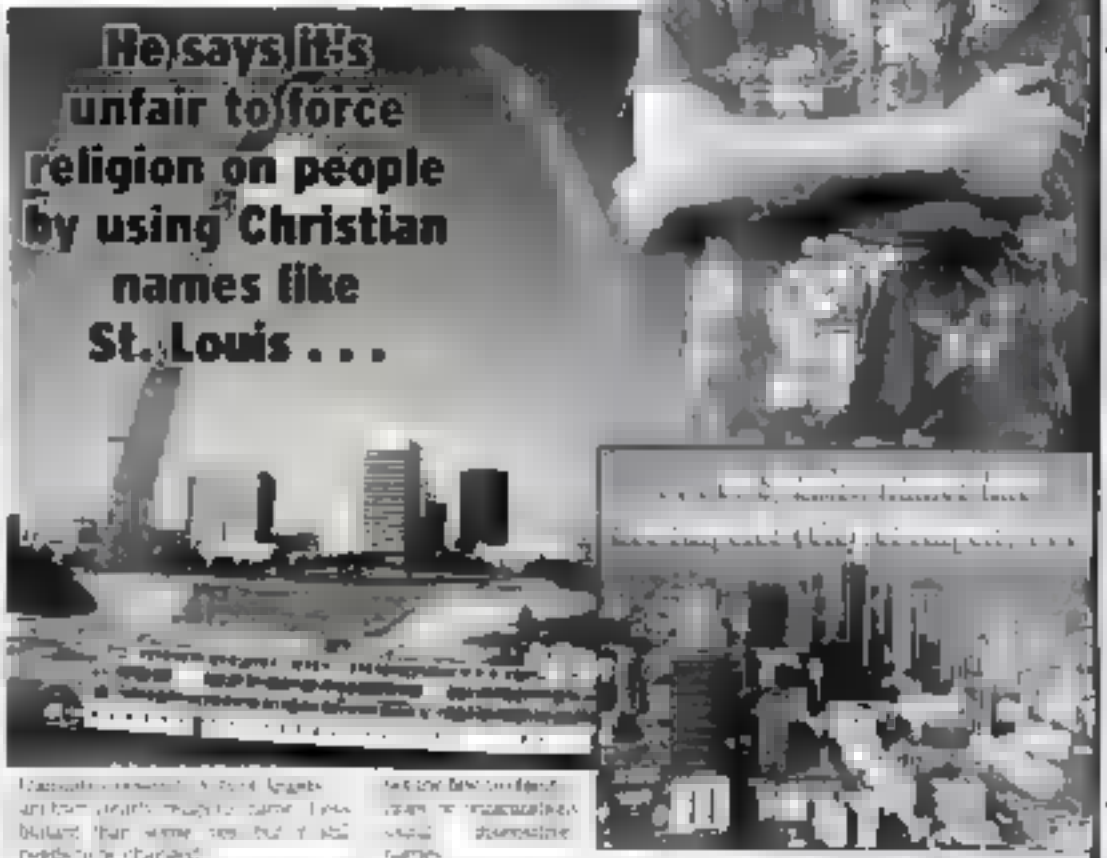
AN ATHEIST is preparing to ignite an unholy war on U.S. cities named after saints, demanding that they change to "non-religious identities that don't force citizens to pray every time they give out their address."

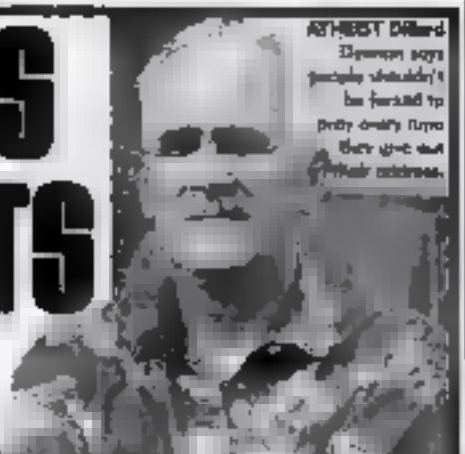
Dillard Dierson says he plans to start with his hometown of St. Louis, Mo., and will file a First Amendment lawsuit if the city's leaders don't agree to change the name by July 1.

"I'm an atheist and an atheist says Dierson, a 37-year-old landscaper who founded the Coalition to Free Americ a From Religion. "It's unfair to force religion on people by using Christian names like St. Louis. Christian names force people to pray that they're only in agreement to be guided by the constitutional principle of keeping religion out of public life."

Dierson says his organization also plans to take legal action against several other cities whose names, the group says, violate the separation of church and state. Coalition members have set their sights on St. Petersburg, Fla., St. Marys, Ky., and San Francisco, Calif.

"San Francisco probably thanks its booming population with its Spanish name," says Dierson. "But we happen to know that the name means 'of Francis' and that's enough to trigger a lawsuit. Another Spanish name, Alcatraz, means 'pelican' and that could be a problem, too."





ATHEIST Dillard Dierson says people shouldn't be forced to pray every time they give out their address.

Officials in most of the targeted cities declined to comment on Dierson's plans, saying they've never heard of the Coalition for a Godless America.

A spokesman for the St. Louis Mayor's office said the campaign is "ridiculous."

"We are not going to change the name because some atheist wants us to," said Mayor Francis G. Slay's spokesman Rick Stream. "The name has been around for 200 years and it's not going to change now."

But Dierson insists that the city will have to change its name if it wants to avoid the wrath of God.

"When you have a city that's named after a saint, you're inviting God to punish you," he said. "Look at what happened to New Orleans and Hurricane Katrina."

Dierson says he's not sure what he'll do if the cities refuse to change their names, but he's willing to take his fight all the way to the Supreme Court.

Native American groups say they support the group's efforts to change the names of cities that they say honor genocide. People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals made international headlines when it asked Harrison, N.Y., to change its name to Veganburg.

Since St. Louis residents can't expect a name change, he says he'll settle for a boycott.

"I was always taught that St. Louis was the largest gay [and XIX] sex in the country," he said. "I don't want to be associated with anything that's supposed to be Christian."

Dierson says he's not sure how much support he'll get from the gay community, but he's hoping that the city's name will be enough to get them on board.

"I'm an atheist and I'm gay, and I'm not going to pray to God that I'm not gay," he said. "I'm not going to pray to God that I'm not an atheist. I'm not going to pray to God that I'm not a Christian. Laura Bush ticked off over new tattoo

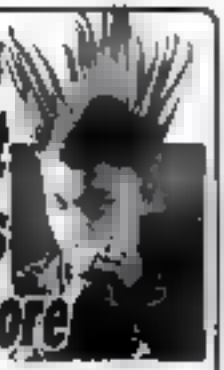
First lady Laura Bush was stunned to learn that the "wash-off" henna tattoo she got as a surprise for the president is more permanent than she was led to believe.

The heart emblazoned with "Dubya," the president's nickname, will be good to go for at least two months and possibly three, a highly placed staff member says.

"She is not amused," says the source. "The tattoo is on her right thigh. She won't be able to wear her swimsuit until after the Fourth of July."

Henna is a reddish stubborn reddish brown dye derived from the leaves of the henna plant.

Teens aren't punks anymore



MOST American teens are polite, [illegible] and [illegible] more [illegible] than their [illegible] were when they were young, a blockbuster new study confirms.

"Teenagers aren't the pimply-faced, reckless hellions and insufferable smart alecks they used to be," say the authors of the study that was conducted by the prestigious National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

"In fact, just the opposite seems to be true. The majority of young men and young women in their teens are [illegible] behaved, well educated [illegible] adjusted.

"Unfortunately, a few bad apples get all the publicity, leading to the erroneous belief that all teenagers are despicable."

The researchers concluded that parents who are having difficulties with their teenagers should "look in the mirror and ask themselves some hard questions.

"Chances are, parents are the problem — not the kids."

WRONG WAY DRIVER CAUSES

AN 84-YEAR-OLD man puttering down the highway thought he was doing his civic duty when he flagged down a police car to warn that everyone else was driving in the wrong direction.

The granddaddy told cops that he had even flashed his lights at the motorists in an urgent bid to let them know they were headed the wrong way on the road in Bern, Switzerland.

It almost broke cops' hearts to have to tell the elderly driver that he was the one who was all turned around. They took the flustered oldster's car keys and drove him home — and politely

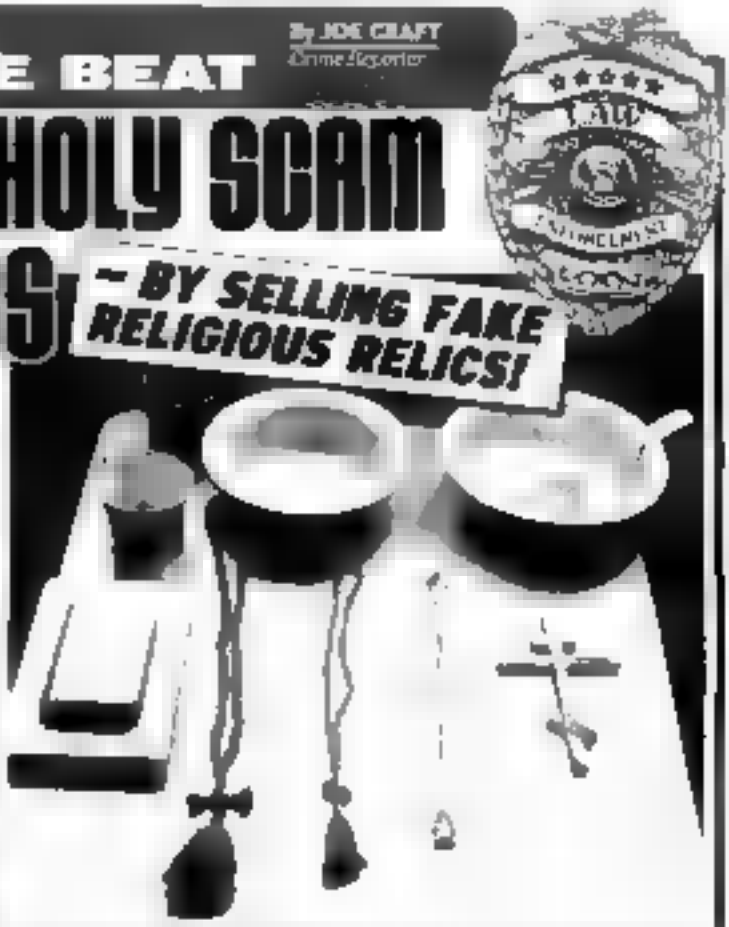
CON MEN PULL UNHOLY SCAM ON DEVOUT BUYERS

~ BY SELLING FAKE RELIGIOUS RELICS!



CROOKS are making big bucks in these troubled times, and now they're using high-tech tools to resurrect an ancient rip-off: Selling fake religious relics to gullible customers on the Internet.

Interpol reports that a businessman in Paris paid $100,000 for what he thought was the jawbone of Old Testament giant Goliath — but which turned out to be the lower chompers of an ancient gorilla.

Closer to home, a devout woman in El Paso, Texas, paid more than $30,000 — her entire life savings — for a piece of bloodstained cloth that she was assured had come from the dress worn by the Virgin Mary at Christ's crucifixion. It was just a paint-splashed rag.

"This trade in fake religious relics is growing, especially on the Internet," says a veteran FBI agent. "People around the world are being conned into buying worthless trinkets masquerading as holy relics."

The agent has personally tracked a dozen cases in just the last six months, and says other FBI field offices and international law-enforcement agencies are investigating more than 1,200 cases in all.

Fakery has plagued religious relics since the early days of the Catholic Church. Christians believed in the healing power of the relics and eagerly purchased what they thought were holy artifacts: Bits of bone and flesh from the bodies of saints, splinters from the actual cross on which Jesus died, scraps of cloth touched by the Apostles. But many often turned out, they were buying worthless junk from heartless hucksters.

"You could get a small forest of all the so-called splinters the crucifix that have been to these poor souls," says a Vatican official who has been consulting with law enforcement on the scams.

There are legitimate sellers of religious trinkets and artifacts, he says, but hundreds more crooked ones. "And by the time we get to most of them, they've already changed their post office box numbers and their Web-site address and started up in a whole new site," says a detective in San Jose, Calif.

For many victims, like 78-year-old Martin of Boise, Idaho, the scam disappointing as well as expensive. "I felt like such a fool," he says, after getting taken for $14,000. He thought he was getting a fragment of St. Peter's sandal. "When I opened up the package, I found a hunk of plastic — with the 'Made in China' label still attached. It was like they were laughing at me."

Another victim, 67-year-old Mabel of Orlando, Fla., says she's not angry after losing $3,000 to a Web merchant who claimed to offer a piece of the lyre from King Solomon's mines.

"You know what the Bible says," the retired schoolteacher notes calmly. "'Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord.'

"They may not get their punishment in this life," she vows, "but they'll pay in the next — and for all eternity."

CRIME BLOTTER

MOM STUNG AT GIRL'S PARTY

A misguided mom may do 15 months in jail for bizarre behavior at her teenage son's birthday party. She bought beer for the kids and gripped for them, prosecutors say.

The 35-year-old Pennsylvania woman was convicted of corruption and furnishing alcohol to minors — the boys were 13 to 14 years old — after she took it all off when the party's planned entertainment went bust.

She pleaded guilty to the charges and said she was out of her head from pills and booze, but didn't admit to doing the striptease.

GAL RAISES FAKE BOMB THREAT

A woman made a fake bomb threat to an airport — because she didn't have the money to cancel a vacation with her boyfriend.

The 28-year-old Croatian woman told a German court she wanted to cancel the trip because she couldn't tell her parents she was jetting off with her boyfriend. But she was embarrassed to tell him that.

"Then I had the idea that if the trip could somehow be blocked by someone else, for example a bomb threat, then that would solve all the problems," she said.

Her hoax shut down the busy airport in Dusseldorf and stranded 64,000 people for several hours last September. Police traced the call to her boyfriend's cell phone.

The woman was convicted of disturbing the peace and got a two-year suspended sentence. She also faces almost $2 million in fines.

EASTER BASKET FILLED WITH [illegible]

State troopers in Utah say they found quite an Easter treat: Some 25 pounds of pot wrapped in holiday wallpaper!

Lawmen say the illegal Easter basket turned up during a routine traffic stop that weekend before the holiday. The pot was loaded into a car-top carrier and the driver and four passengers were busted.

Cops say the pot has a street value of $100,000.

DOPE OF THE WEEK

GAL RACES UP HOME TO RETRIEVE PRICEY DOPE

A GERMAN woman drove to a police station to retrieve her lost handbag — and then lost her car keys and her driver's license, because she was in the bag after a few too many drinks!

The drunk woman showed up after they called her. "She was so happy she jumped straight in the car and came down to get it," says a police spokesman. "The thing is, we saw her coming. She'd had a lot to drink.

"The first thing she got out of the bag was her license, which we took,

Mentioning your husband or wife could get you fired!

DON'T REFER to your better half as your "husband" or "wife" at public outings — and if you want to be politically correct.

A group in Berkeley, Calif., has come up with a list of terms that are likely to give offense to guys, and coming up with a "politically correct" word. "Occasionally mentioning you have a 'wife' at home can make it seem that you're going out of your way to make it clear that you're heterosexual," says a spokesman for the Berkeley Men's Collective. "Instead, you should refer to your 'partner.'"

My America

By ED ANGER DOUBLE-FEATURE

Readers fire back at Ed!

EVERY once in a while our controversial columnist Ed Anger gets a hankerin' to dip into his mailbag and, as he puts it, "see what the bedwetters are bellyaching about now." Some folks staunchly support him, others are outraged or dismayed, but no one is ever bored by what he has to say. About the only thing you can do is run for cover when Ed shoots off his mouth — and return fire if you dare . . .

DEAR ED: You are a complete nincompoop! How can you possibly argue that outsourcing is great for America? Thanks to your buddy President Bush, thousands of good jobs are being shipped overseas. My husband is an engineer and he's worried sick that he's going to lose his job to someone in India who'll work for one-tenth the money.

It's all well and good for you to write that we can all just "live off the fat of the land," but unlike you, not everyone is a "good old boy" who owns a gun and gets a thrill from killing helpless animals. Maybe one morning when you report to work, you'll be told that from now on your column will be written by a guy named Ali in Calcutta with a big dot on his forehead — then you'll get the point.

— Alison M., Odessa, Texas

Dear Ed,

As a Christian, you ought to be ashamed of yourself for suggesting that gays should be compelled by law to marry. Whether or not compulsory marriage causes homosexuals to "stop pestering the rest of us," as you put it, is totally irrelevant. Homosexuality is a sin — in fact the Bible says explicitly that the punishment is to be death, not that we should go that far.

— Martha S., Clarksdale, Miss.

Dear Ed,

You are the most weird, rectal homophobic idiot in America. Your foaming-at-the-mouth rant against Spain as a nation of cowards after it announced plans to withdraw its troops from Iraq was absolutely unwarranted. Then you absurdly go on to denounce every aspect of Hispanic culture, from bullfighting to hot tamales. By the way, you clueless jerk, Cheech Marin is a Mexican-American who speaks with a very slight Chicano accent. The idea of "deporting" him to Madrid unless he learns to sound less Spanish is ridiculous.

— Manuel N., Staten Island, N.Y.

Dear Ed,

I completely disagree with your statement that watching celebrity trials like the upcoming Kobe rape case is a waste of time. I didn't miss a single minute of the O.J. trial and every night I'd tune in to hear Geraldo and his panel of legal experts analyze the proceedings. And I certainly plan to follow the Kobe case just as closely.

Citizens can learn much about America's great legal system from watching these real-life court dramas.

— Mari V., Lafayette, Ind.

Dear Ed,

Maybe you're right and there is no evolution. That would certainly explain why knuckle-dragging Neanderthals like you are still around.

— Jan H., Newport, Ark.

Dear Ed,

I was personally insulted by your recent column saying that men who earn less money than their wives are "wimps." My wife happens to be a high-powered attorney who commands a six-figure income — and I couldn't be more proud of her. Her high salary has allowed our family to enjoy a better lifestyle than it could on what I used to earn working construction. In fact, I've been able to quit to stay home and raise our three kids.

I love spending quality time with the children and I find cooking gourmet meals every day and keeping our house together both challenging and fulfilling.

— Stephen L., Paterson, N.J.

Ed replies: I rest my case.

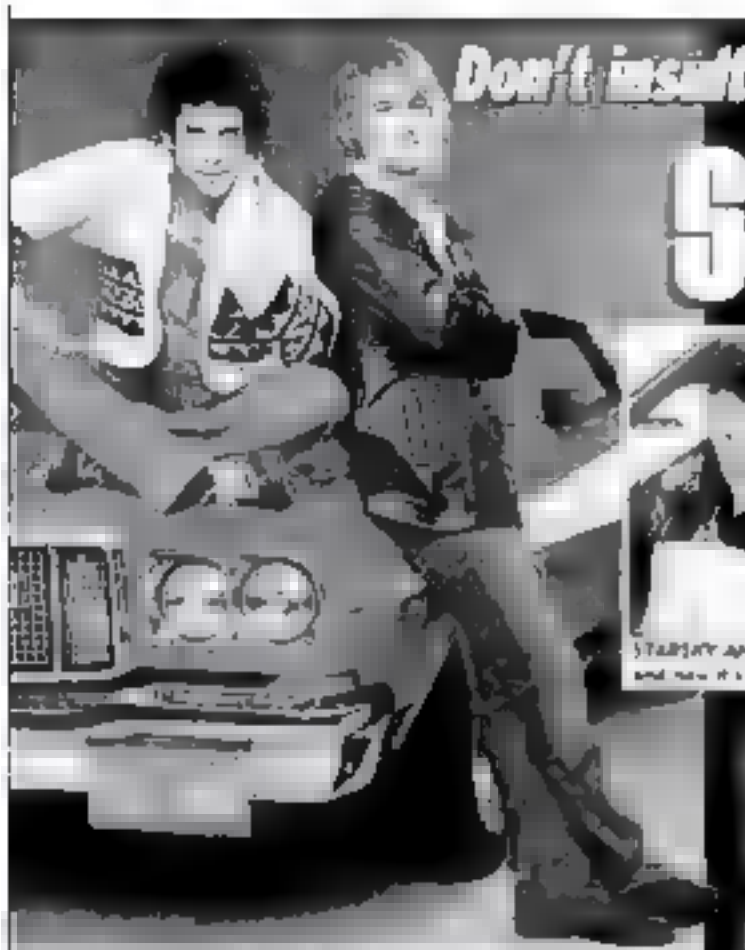
Dear Ed,

Hallelujah! I'm glad someone out there is finally telling the truth. Your column about how Darwin's theory of evolution is a bunch of claptrap and we ought to stop teaching it in schools was right on the money. If evolution really worked, why wouldn't we see dogs and cats starting to walk on their hind legs and use tools by now?

— Cathy F., Georgetown, S.C.

Don't insult my intelligence, says Ed . . .

STOP MAKING STUPID OLD TV SHOWS INTO MOVIES!



STARSKY AND HUTCH was just an TV show and now it's a waste of the screen, left says Ed

I'M MADDER than the Six Million Dollar Man with worn-out shock absorbers at the way Hollywood keeps turning corny old TV shows into movies!

The rest of America may be chafing at the bit waiting for The Jetsons. The Movie to come out and to see big screen versions of Miami and Charlie and the Mets. But to yours truly it's just another sign that American society is going to Hell in a handbasket.

An old head once told me the surefire way of knowing that a civilization is headed down the toilet is when the quality of entertainment nosedives and you see it annihilating itself.

Well, we may not have Amazons fighting models in the arena yet, but you take a look at . . . movies. Like

CHICO AND THE MAN is not Ed's idea of entertainment

If this is the best Hollywood can come up with, it's the end of civilization as we know it

[illegible] Hollywood [illegible] movies [illegible] Dollar . . . in which Dean Jones and Clampett players crashed a golf tournament [illegible] Dukes of Hazzard. Not likely that we'll see a sequel to the last one of the bunch, with Burt Reynolds as Boss Hogg to boot.

Heck, I even hear tell there are talks to make a movie out of Land of the Giants, which had to be the stupidest sci-fi show ever on the air.

And don't get me started on those pictures ripped off from old Saturday Night Live skits. Why in Heaven's name would I want to see a whole movie about characters I could care a lot less about in three minutes a week?

Now the only thing worse than ripping up the bones of these old TV shows to make pictures about is all those stupid remakes.

Back in the good old days when you took your best shot at the newest and saw the great Duke Wayne starring in The Greatest Show on Earth, you could see a remake and the first go around just didn't have enough oomph.

But now again they keep remaking movies that just came out a few years back and the new version of Lassie or the Bond Villain star bears no resemblance with the original. Are the perpetrators of these crimes against humanity so creatively bankrupt that they can't even come up with a new idea?

And it's not even going to be enough to make a picture about a TV show. It's got to be a remake of the first go around that didn't have enough oomph.

Hopefully, Hollywood is going to keep everything old TV shows. I say at least we'll demand that they pick programs that have great solid family values. I wouldn't mind taking my grandchildren and nephews to see Father Knows Best, The Waltons.

Maybe a day's work are exposed to wholesome stuff from Cybersex, MTV, pornography, all the endless modern-day crash they see on MTV on a regular basis.

Hopefully, it will be a day when we can see Mr. Ed on the big screen.

Yeah, that's the ticket.

HEY LOSERS, GET LUCKY!

Use these tips to help boost your career and become irresistible to the opposite sex!

IF YOU blame bad luck because you're broke, your career has stalled or your love life is a dud, you're not making excuses, says a top psychologist. You really are unlucky!

People who think they're unlucky are right, says Dr Rodolfo Manzanilla. But he also says you can make your own luck — you can change it from bad to good, and start attracting the success and prosperity that have been eluding you your whole life.

"The so-called common wisdom is that there's no such thing as luck, good or bad – that success is a matter of working hard and taking advantage of opportunities," says Dr Manzanilla a Madrid psychologist whose pioneering studies on human potential have been published in scientific journals around the world. "But the fact is luck is what brings those opportunities to us and gives us the energy and creativity to take advantage of them.

"I'm not talking about chance," he adds. "You have no control over whether your lottery number gets picked, and you never will.

"But can you increase your chances of finding someone else's winning lottery ticket that they might have tossed out by mistake, or of getting in line at just the right time to buy the scratch-off ticket with the big jackpot?

"Yes – with the same luck attracting habits that will boost your career and make you irresistible to the opposite sex."

Dr Manzanilla recently conducted a research project for a major U.S financial institution and says he found five important differences between lucky and unlucky people.

1 Lucky people believe they're lucky, unlucky people believe they're doomed. Dr Manzanilla says his research supports previous findings on this. "Lucky people expect that good luck will come their way," he says. "And so it does. Contrast that with people who are convinced that they have a dark cloud over their head – for them, it's always raining.

"Probably the luckiest subject in my study was Sean, a 45-year-old man from Fort Lauderdale Fla. He's just started his own marketing business and every month he manages to sign at least [illegible] clients just as a major bill comes due.

"But he doesn't actually try to get new business. He's just always sure that he's going to 'luck into' new business, which gives him a quality that draws people to him."

On the other hand, he says aspiring actress Andrea is convinced nothing ever goes her way. "And it rarely does," he says. She missed a producer's call for a Broadway audition because she was sure it was a bill collector so she didn't answer the phone.

2 Lucky people are alert and ready for good fortune to come their way, unlucky people are wrapped up in themselves Dr Manzanilla says he sent a lucky person and an unlucky person to the same yard sale to see what they could find.

The unlucky person found nothing, while the lucky person got a $5,000 vanity for $10! It had been hidden behind some old appliances.

"Greg, the unlucky person left after half-heartedly browsing the entire sale for 10 minutes," Dr. Manzanilla says. "Stan, the lucky one, says he 'got a feeling' he should hunt in a certain spot, and found a treasure."

3 Unlucky people are easily upset by setbacks, but lucky people are sure they'll recover.

A layoff hit hard the 41-year-old graphic artist Janet, who waited two weeks feeling sorry for herself before she even started looking for a new job.

But hours after 43-year-old accountant Claudia got fired, she shrugged off the bad news and met a friend for drinks at a local bar — where she met an old colleague who happened to be in town for just that night.

The friend was in charge of hiring at a major technology firm and hired Claudia on the spot. "She got a big raise and she still got to keep her severance package from the old job," the psychologist says.

4 Unlucky people are anxious and tense, while lucky people relax. "This makes unlucky people miss important opportunities, because they are so worried about saying or doing the wrong thing," Dr Manzanilla says.

"They tend to be wallflowers at parties, while the lucky ones are making all the new friends and contacts."

Bob, a 40-year-old lawyer from Chicago, met his wife while standing in line at a ballpark concession stand. "She's so beautiful she intimidates many men," the psychologist says, "but Bob just started chatting with her to pass the time. By the time he got his hot dog, he also had a date."

year-old salesman from New York, won $10,000 with a lottery scratch off ticket.

"He usually bought a ticket at the same store where he got his coffee every morning, and never won more than a few free tickets," Dr Mamapilla says.

"One day he decided to take a different route to work and got the ticket at a different store.

"Fred also shows the power of belief in luck," says Dr Mamapilla.

"I'd be willing to bet that there was someone else who could have been in the right spot to buy that winning ticket instead of Fred. But they probably figured it was no use to waste their money.

"Fred had bought plenty of losing lottery tickets, but he knew that sooner or later his luck would come in. And it looks like it did."

NAME NEXT U.S. MILITARY OP & WIN 2 T-SHIRTS!

CONCERNED Pentagon officials say they're running out of grandiose names for military operations!

Most of the really powerful and catchy names, such as Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Anaconda Storm, have already been used. In recent months, the military has been forced to resort to names that sound a bit silly, redundant or simply nonsensical, such as Operation Vigilant Resolve.

"It's a real challenge coming up with names. They have to be inspiring to the troops and easy for TV news anchors to pronounce," says a Pentagon communications expert. "No one really anticipated that we'd be asked to churn out so many of these operation names, one right after another."

If you have a suggestion for a good name for an upcoming military mission, send it to the Weekly World News and we'll forward it to the appropriate authorities at the Defense Department. And if your suggestion is one of those picked by the brass, we'll send you two free WWN T-shirts.

Send your name ideas to Military Operation Names, c/o Weekly World News, P.O. Box 3034, Boca Raton, FL 33431-0936.

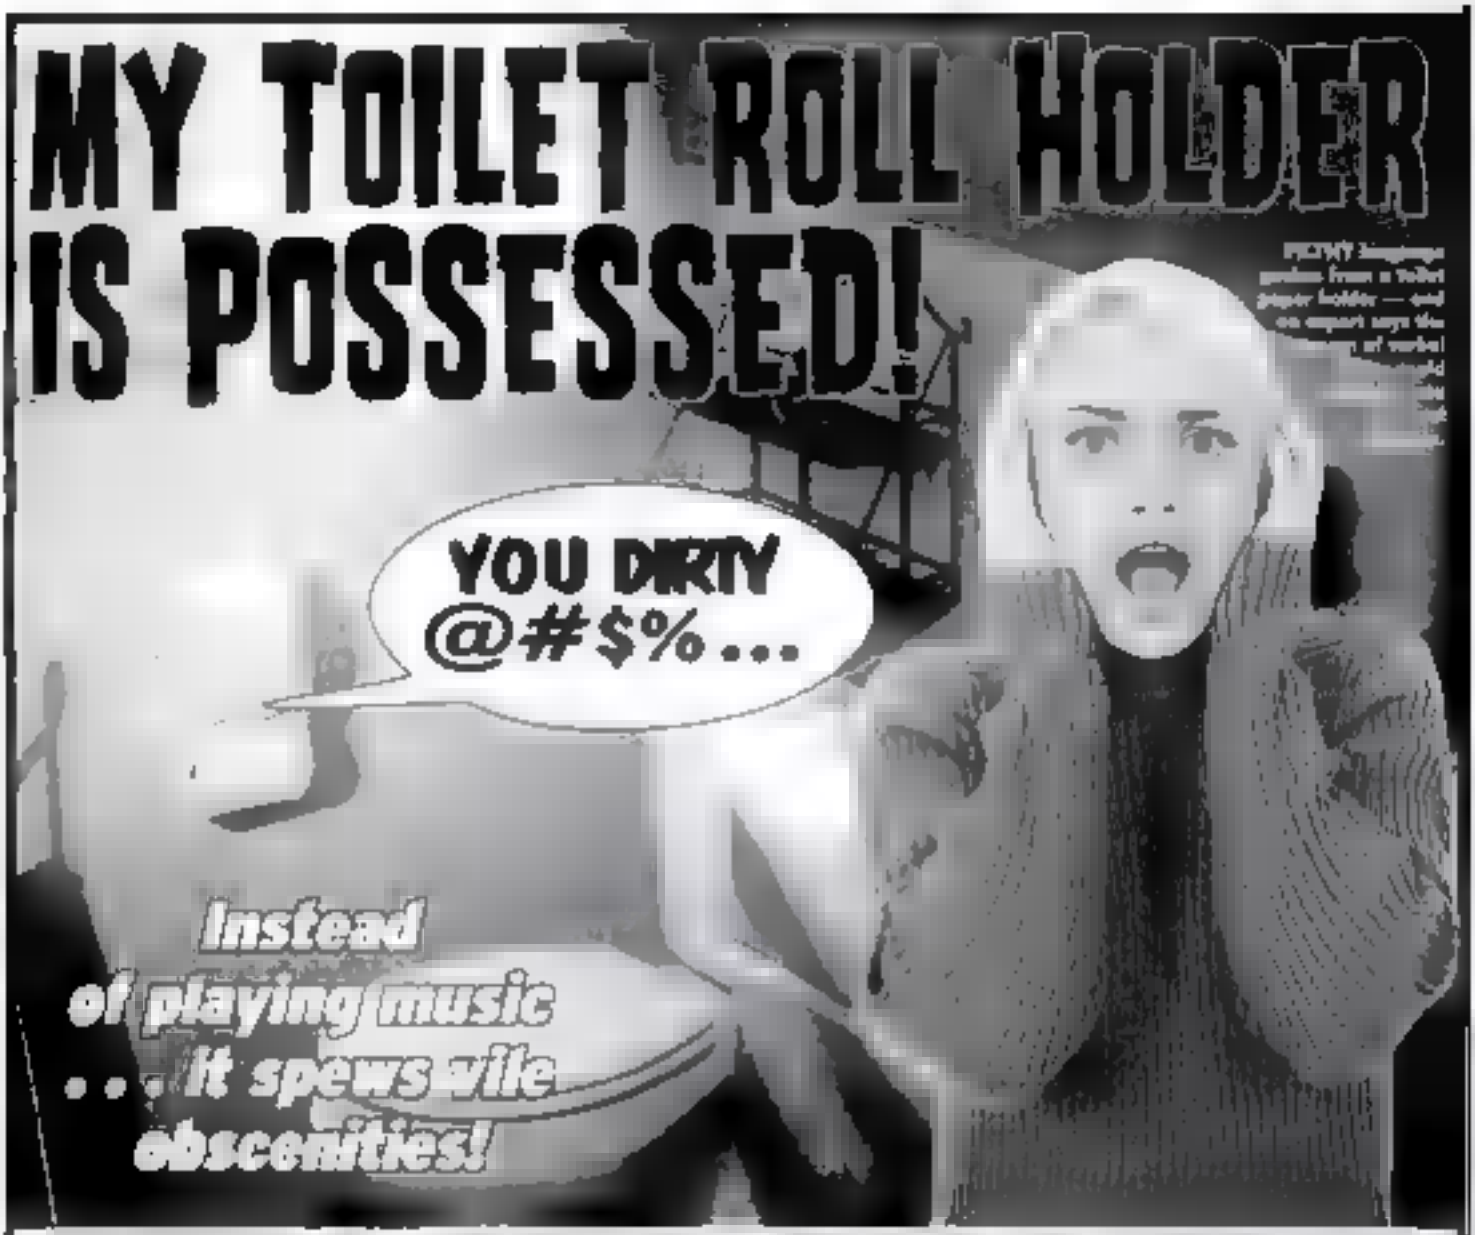
MY TOILET ROLL HOLDER IS POSSESSED!



By PAUL BRONSON

"HELP! My toilet roll holder talks to me and what it says is not very nice."

That heartfelt plea from house wife Anne Alderson has been handed by a top paranormal expert who says she's determined to get to the bottom of the problem.

According to Alderson, 37, the toilet roll dispenser is supposed to play Hoppy Days' theme tune when it turns, but instead it launches into a stream of vile obscenities and makes erotic and distasteful references to bodily functions.

"I don't even like to repeat what the toilet roll holder says, it's so horrible," says the agonised mum of two from Acton, Devon. It makes more [illegible] music it spews vile obscenities!

Now paranormal investigator [illegible] Burns of Devon Paranormal Research Group is determined to get to the bottom of the problem.

"I suspect poltergeist activity is involved in the bathroom and the incident. We need to find out the mental state of the people involved."

Mrs Alderson says the holder speaks [illegible] when people pass it. "It says 'Happy Days Theme' and then the music stopped and the abuse started."

Alderson says she began to act as a sex master for the dispenser. "I realised that it was the only way I might get rid of it."

INTERNATIONAL SUICIDE DAY!

THINK TANKERS at the United Nations are hoping to win broad support for an International Suicide Day to help curb runaway population.

"Seven billion people are too many — we need to take the matter right up with the U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim.

"Most of them are going to starve to death or get killed anyway. Suicide day will make things easier on everyone. It's an idea whose time has arrived."

A date mechanism would be ready for a vote as early as June, with the success being that "the big day" is tentatively set for December 31 — "a fantastic New Year and a great celebration."

Heads of state and family people who won't be getting any gifts might be encouraged to give suicide a try."

VITAL STATISTICS Born June 14, 1961, in Kent, England. Birth name: George Alan O'Dowd. Height: 6 feet. Eyes: Brown. Marital status: Single, gay.

DEAR DOTTI: Four months ago when I was in Georgia visiting my parents I met [redacted] great guy at a truck stop where I was getting some gasoline [redacted] a bowl of home-style chili. Johnny was good-looking and as nice as could be. One thing led to another and he said that since I was on vacation anyway, I should ride out to Seattle and back in his 18-wheeler.

We had a wonderful time. Johnny was the nicest person I ever met. Most of all he was a real man who really knew how to make the most of that built-in bunk in the [redacted] of his [redacted]. [redacted] told me [redacted] loved me and that he had been looking for a woman like me for a long time. [redacted] said we [redacted] married [redacted] that in a week or two he would call me when I got back to my apartment in Omaha. But I haven't heard from him since. I'm worried sick that he may have gotten hurt or even killed in a wreck. What am I going to do, Dotti? How can I find Johnny? — Waiting in Omaha

Dear Waiting: You didn't mention your age — but if you're older than 5 or 6 you're now dumb broad. Maybe you can find your "good buddy" — or a suitable replacement — if you hang out at truck stops in Omaha. Just be sure to wear a short skirt and bend over a lot.

How can I get my hubby to grow a long, luxuriant beard?

Dear Dotti: I've been married for seven years, and for the past two I've been nagging my hubby to grow a beard. I had no idea why until a few nights ago when his best friend came over to visit. He has the same kind of big, bushy, manly beard I want my Fred to grow. So it's pretty obvious that I've had a crush on his buddy without realizing it. Now I feel like our marriage is in jeopardy — and will continue to be unless Fred grows a beard. He hates whiskers and says there's absolutely no way he's going to grow a beard unless I start doing something kinky in the bedroom that I've always refused to do in the past. What am I going to do? — Can't Decide in Austin

Dear Can't Decide: Accept Fred the way he is, Toots, or hit the streets. I personally think big bushy beards and mustaches are grubby, filthy smelly attempts to cover up something — like missing teeth or an ugly face.

The gal I love is too shy to date me

Dear Dotti: I'm a 14-year-old boy who has a crush on a girl who's a year younger than me. She's a little bit younger than me, 13, but we're both shy so I'm sure we'll hit it off romantically if I can just get her to open up and talk to me. I finally got up the courage to ask her if she [redacted] went to go to a movie or something sometime. But she's so shy she said she couldn't go out with me because she's "really busy right now with school and all." Should I keep asking her out? I'm not sure what to do. — Shy Guy in St. Louis

DEAR [redacted]: I'm 19 and the love of my life is 18. The problem is, I feel funny whenever we go out in public because he's 5-foot-1 and I'm 6-foot-7. I feel so self-conscious. I've told him how I feel but he says me just to [redacted] it because he loves me anyway. He doesn't realize that I'm not just embarrassed for me, I'm embarrassed for him, too. He's a real shrimp. So now I find myself coming up with all kinds of excuses for not going out in public with him. What should I do? — Embarrassed in Clemson

Dear Embarrassed: Go buy a comic book and send off for a pair of those "be big" shoe inserts advertised in the back that promise to make you two inches taller. That'll bring the dwarf up to 5-foot-8. You can take care of the extra inch by slumping your shoulders and/or lying.

I have big friends with just BUTT hair

Dear Dotti: All my friends make fun of me because I have a really small butt, and I mean really, really, really small. I'm an 18-year-old woman and have normal sized breasts and a normal waist. But below that, everything just tapers off — I've even been told I'm shaped like the letter "Y" and people also call me "The Human Clothes Pin." I hate my butt but I don't know what to do about it. And I'm sick of all the teasing. Help! — Buttnaked Out in Hendersonville

Dear Buttnaked Out: The next time these so-called friends of yours cut loose with the jokes, turn the other cheek. While you're at it, flip through the Yellow Pages until you find the heading, "Cosmetic Surgeons — Butt Implants." It will be the best $20,000 you ever spent.

Dear Pastor: I don't see why not.

Daddy likes to wear women's underpants!

Dear Dotti: Our dad wears women's underpants when he goes horseback riding. Before our mother died, she told us he does it because men's underpants chafed him when he rode. He's very self-conscious about this and goes to great lengths to keep it secret. He doesn't know that my brother and I know about it. How can we let him know that we understand what he is doing and it's O.K. with us? — "True Blue" Sons in Omaha

Dear True Blue Sons: The next time the old pervy gets ready to go horseback riding, sneak up behind him and pull down his pants. Laugh and point and hoot and holler until he jumps in and starts laughing himself. With everything out in the open, his sick habit will no longer be an issue.

What does it feel like to be perfect, Dotti?

Dear Dotti: I'm a 22-year-old cosmetology student. I have a wonderful boyfriend and dear friends who share interests with me. I'm nice looking and I keep my hair, nails, and clothes neat. Oh, and I almost forgot — I'm very overweight. I've been heavy since birth and I've dieted constantly to try to please heartless people like you who refer to kind souls like me as lard-bottoms and fatties. Well, Dotti, what does it feel like to be as perfect as you obviously think you are? — Marie in Nelson

THE DISCOVERY of a mermaid in a fishing net off the coast of Florida has flabbergasted scientists who say the 5-foot creature is at least half human, extremely intelligent — and loves people.

To top it off, she talks a little speak in a sophisticated "three th" mentional language that relies on sounds that may be related to the "click languages" prevalent in parts of Africa and on hand movements that look like the signing that is taught to deaf people around the world.

Experts say it's only a matter of time before they break through the language barrier and begin to communicate directly with the creature.

And when that happens, everything we know about human evolution is likely to be proven false.

"When we finally see the [illegible] we can communicate in words, and when that happens, there will be one thing for sure. Essentially, we know about human evolution, everything we believe about the similarities of human intelligence, everything we've ever thought about Homo sapiens and the direct ancestors of the species, everything we've been taught in research will be wrong," said Florida marine biologist Dr. [illegible].

SATAN IS BUILDING AN ADDITION TO HELL!

SOULS of the newly damned have no place to go.

By VINCENZO SARDI

DON'T WORRY. When there's no more room in Hell, the dead won't walk the Earth — because Satan is building an addition!

That's the bizarre claim of a burned-out Devil worshipper who told Weekly investigators the Evil One plans to enlarge his domain by at least ten million square feet — enough to accommodate billions of damned souls.

"Don Johnson, a pepper-haired, hook-nosed Satanist, tells us his spiritual master is adding four new levels to Hell, adjacent the nine that currently exist. In other words, he's almost doubling its property values," reveals Rev. Antonin Lubovic, a top Vatican demonologist.

The human population has ballooned astronomically in the eons since Hell was built.

"Satan has a certain optimism, sometimes, but unlike God, is not truly omniscient. He could not foresee that the human population would one day soar into the billions," Rev. Lubovic explains.

"The [Johnson] claim that Hell has become severely overcrowded. Demons told him the screams of the damned are so deafening now they can't even hear themselves laugh, and you can't jab someone's butt with a pitchfork without elbowing a fellow denizen in the eye."

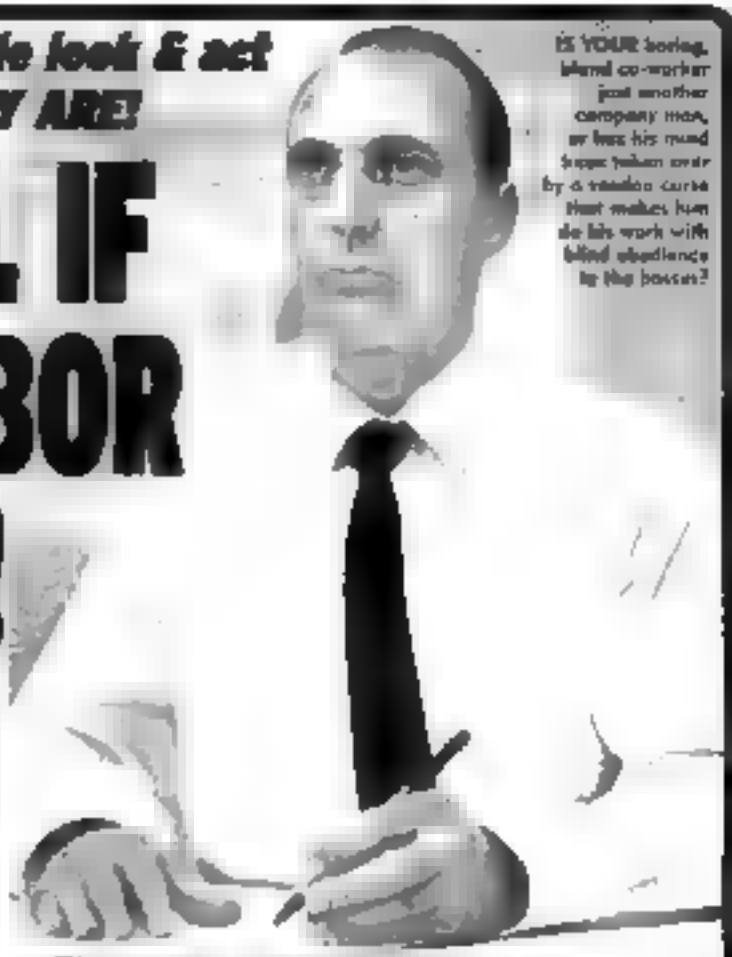
Do you wonder why some people look & act like the living dead? WELL THEY ARE!

HOW TO TELL IF YOUR NEIGHBOR IS A ZOMBIE!



IS YOUR boring, bland co-worker just another company man, or has his mind been taken over by a voodoo curse that makes him do his work with blind obedience to the boss?

By MIGUEL FIGUEROA/Correspondent

YOUR NEXT-DOOR neighbor or co-worker may be a shambling, mindless zombie trapped in a strange twilight existence between life and death!

"That's the alarming warning of a top expert who says as many as one in 30 Americans is one of the walking dead.

"People think that if they stay away from Haiti, they don't have to worry much about zombies, but unfortunately that's no longer the case," declares D.C. based researcher John Roelder.

"There are now millions of zombies in the United States. The chances that the 'quiet type' person working next to you on the assembly line, sitting in your pew at church or mowing the lawn across the street is a zombie are very, very high."

As far back as the 1920s, greedy American businessmen interested in securing cheap labor have visited Haiti to acquire zombie making skills from unscrupulous voodoo priests in exchange for cash, the researcher reveals.

Anonymous government sources have also alleged that some federal and state agencies have quietly installed zombies as low-level bureaucrats.

In the 1980s, Harvard ethnobotanist Wade Davis uncovered the means by which people supposedly dead and buried are turned into total life slaves.

"It turned out poisons are used to paralyze the victims, simulate death and make them highly suggestible when revived," explains Roelder.

"Once the ingredients became common knowledge, employers eagerly wanted in on the action — and since then, there's been a zombie boom here in the U.S."

Here, from the expert, are 10 warning signs that someone who lives or works beside you is a zombie:

1 VACANT EXPRESSION — Zombies rarely display emotion. You may often notice them gazing blankly into space even while you're telling them a great story or joke.

2 FOLLOWS ORDERS WITHOUT QUESTION — Zombies are extremely docile. That co-worker who always was kudos for being a "team player" could be one of the walking dead.

3 SMELLS FUNNY — Zombies typically smell more foul than fresh. "By the time they're taken, most have been treated to disguise their true nature — too much heavy cologne or perfume is another red flag," Roelder points out.

4 PREFERS MINDLESS, REPETITIVE TASKS — Never complains about washing the dishes or other boring household chores.

5 MUMBLES — Don't count on zombies ever using the background noise of more than two words and when they do it's barely audible.

6 DRAB WARDROBE — The walking dead have little concern for grooming or fashion. "A zombie may wear the same suit to the office every day for years," the expert reveals.

7 SHUFFLING GAIT — Zombies rarely stride briskly. "Examine the suspected zombie's shoes — you'll find the soles are very scuffed from dragging their feet," Roelder suggests.

8 FEELS NO PAIN — Poke the suspect in the hand with a letter opener "accidentally" and he or she probably won't even flinch.

9 NEVER ADDS SALT TO FOOD. "Zombies are allergic to salt, just as vampires are to garlic," Roelder explains. "You may also notice they purchase low-sodium products at the supermarket."

10 MESMERIZED BY TV — A zombie can stare intently at a television set for hours on end.

Our government has been using undead as low-level civil servants for years!

CARMEN ELECTRA THINKS ABOUT SEX EVERY 20 SECONDS!

GUYS, if you pass at curvaceous Carmen Electra for a minute and her answers pour mind a couple of times, don't feel guilty — in the same period, it's reported, she's thinking about sex every 20 seconds!

Critic Carmen also admitted she used to be "addicted to stripping," in an interview with Virgin Radio's Ross Jones.

And while the buxotious bombshell is straight as an arrow, she also turned radio back into the theater of the imagination for every red-blooded male listener when she made the steamy revelation that she'd rather have a vibrator strip for her than a man.

"There's something about male strippers, it's a little cheesy for me," remarks Carmen, now starring in the big-screen version of Starsky and Hutch.

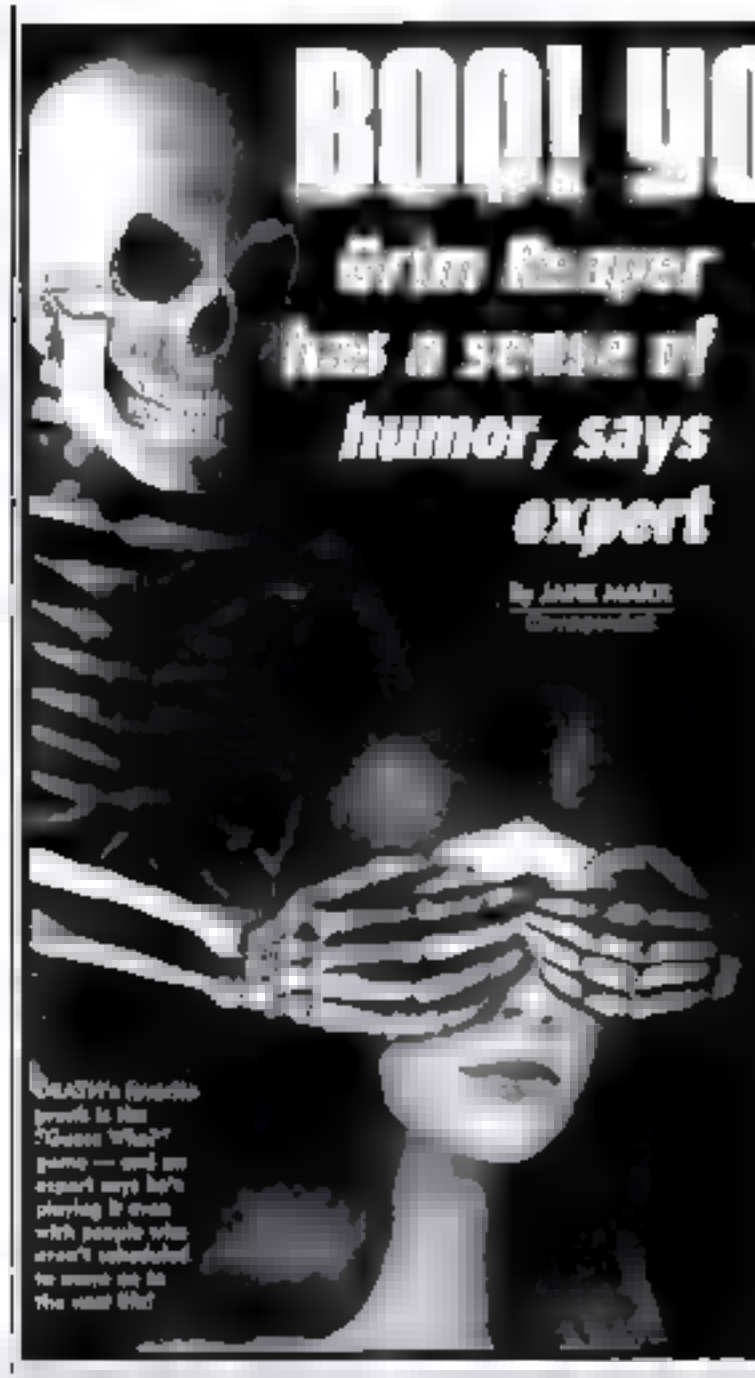
BOO! YOU'RE DEAD!

Grim Reaper has a sense of humor, says expert

By JANE MARIE
Enquirer Correspondent



DEATH's favorite game is the "Guess Who?" game — and an expert says he's playing it even with people who aren't scheduled to meet up in the near future

Death is becoming a real camp, says a [illegible] expert.

"His latest trick is to step silently behind somebody, put his bony hands over their eyes and say, 'Guess who?'," says Dr. Kenneth McAlpine, a London-based researcher.

"And when the victim turns around, he or she sees a grinning skeleton in a necklace and cuffs saying 'Ha-ha-ha!' and promptly drops dead of a heart attack.

"The sick Death doesn't have a sense of humor — dark and twisted as it may be."

Dr. McAlpine says she was alerted to the phenomenon by a dozen odd witnesses who had a similar experience with the Reaper last November. The oddest report was related moments after death by the deceased "Guess Who?" victim.

"Fortunately for my research, and for him, I guess, the victim lives to tell," Dr. McAlpine says. "And in the brief moment after death in which the victim was granted clear consciousness — apparently Death gets a big kick out of this confusion and terror — he told people who aren't even on his list."

But at least the other people haven't been on long.

Dr. McAlpine explained that moments before succumbing to the victim gasped into the air and was startled desperate words such as "Whoa, no — please, I'm not ready to go."

"Of course no one living sees the specter of Death in these cases, so this is a matter of conjecture on my part," Dr. McAlpine admits. "But these chilling deathbed cries, and the first-person accounts of near-death subjects, tell me that I am absolutely correct."

In one tragic case, Dr. McAlpine says, a 76-year-old farmer in Iowa was sitting at the breakfast table as his wife ordered at the stove behind him.

That's when Death arrived to play "Guess Who?"

"The poor man evidently thought he was feeling his own wife's rather bony hands over his face, because she later told us she heard him saying, 'Why, who could it be but my darling Lucy?'

"She said he turned around and smiled at her — and dropped dead."

The skeletal game isn't Death's only dirty trick, according to Dr. McAlpine. There are many others.

A 40-year-old librarian sat at a computer station at the checkout desk and looked up to see Death glaring at her as he leaned for a book to sign out. "The person who was supposed to be first in line was the first one to die," Dr. McAlpine says. "Several frightened bibliophiles later reported seeing the spiritual flying through the air before the startled librarian, and all dashed screaming it."

A 16-year-old college student with a heart murmur checked into bed one night and found it had been "short-sheeted" by her roommate — or so she thought. "It was Death, of course," Dr. McAlpine says, adds.

Dr. McAlpine advises that if Death tries to play "Guess Who?" or attempts some other childish prank, the best course is to simply refuse to play along.

"If you find some fake vomit on your desk at work, laugh it off," she says. "If you find the bony hands of Death over your eyes and you hear 'Guess who?' just say in a calm voice, 'I don't know and I don't care.'

"If it's your time to pass on, you won't be able to get out of your meeting with your lifeless" she says.

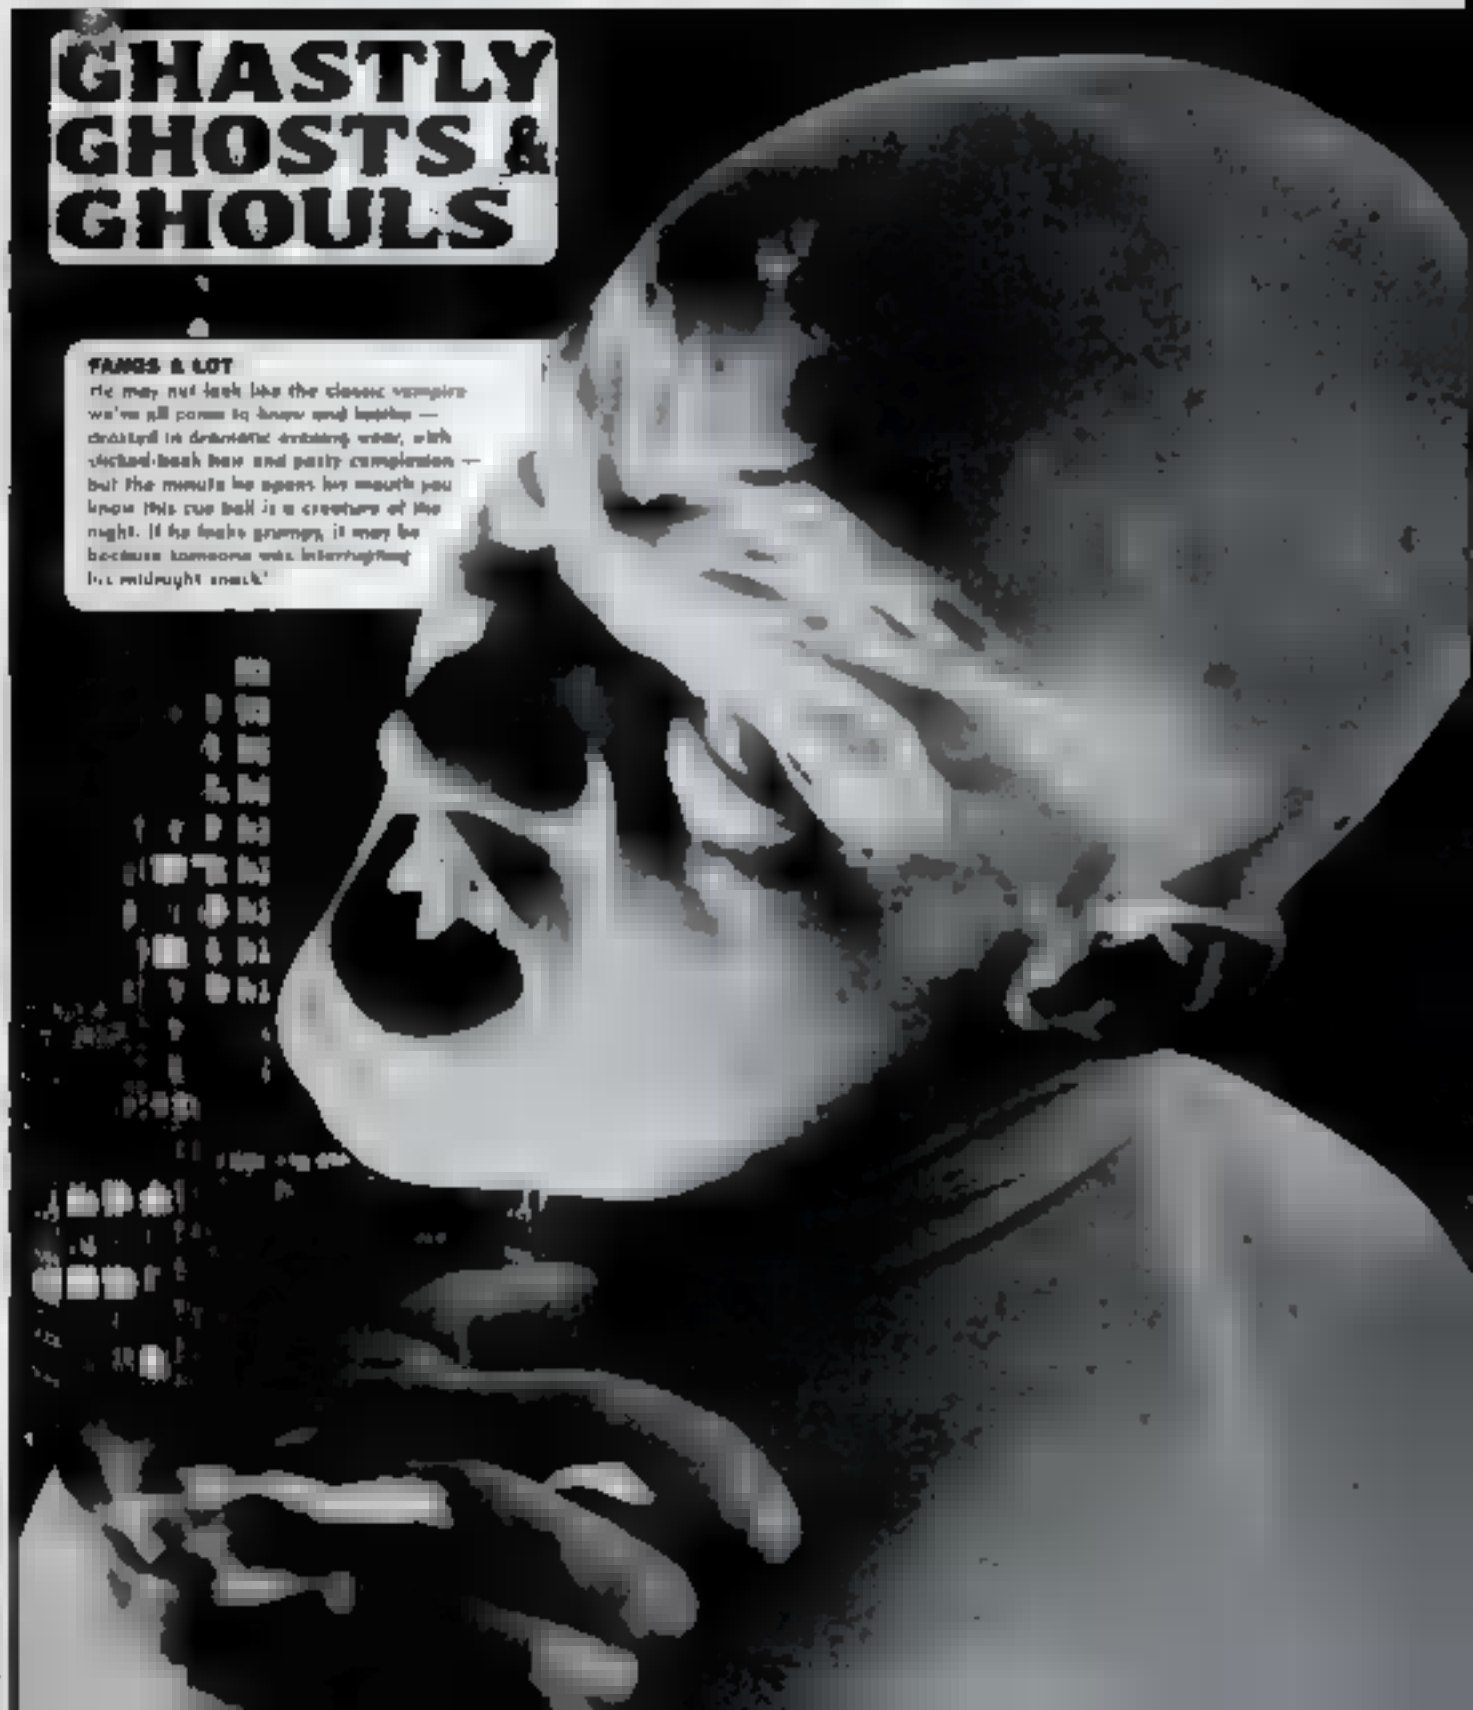
GHASTLY GHOSTS & GHOULS

HAUNTED mansions, doomed lovers, gruesome demons — the world is full of scary things, and if you're like most people you can't get enough of them! We've assembled a cauldron of creepy stories and freaky photos that are sure to send a delicious chill down your spine. So sit back, relax and enjoy. Just make sure you check the closets and turn on all the lights!

HAUNTING HITCHHIKER

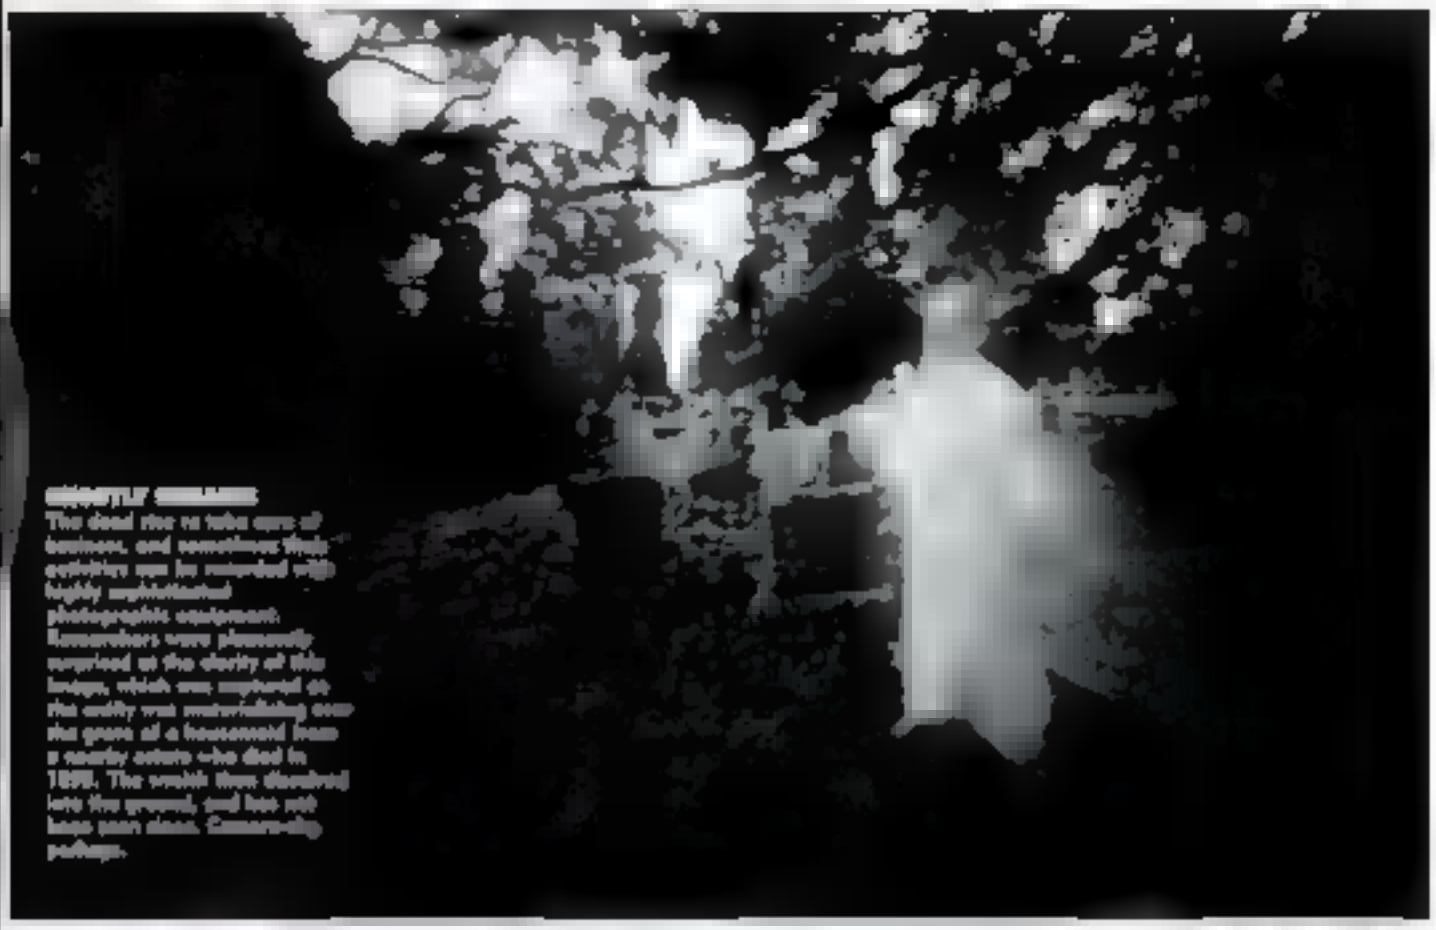
A news photographer picked up this eerie image while covering a savage Western blizzard. Old-time residents of the area swear it's the image of a hitchhiking college student who'd been run down and killed by a truck that were out of control during a

GHASTLY GHOSTS & GHOULS

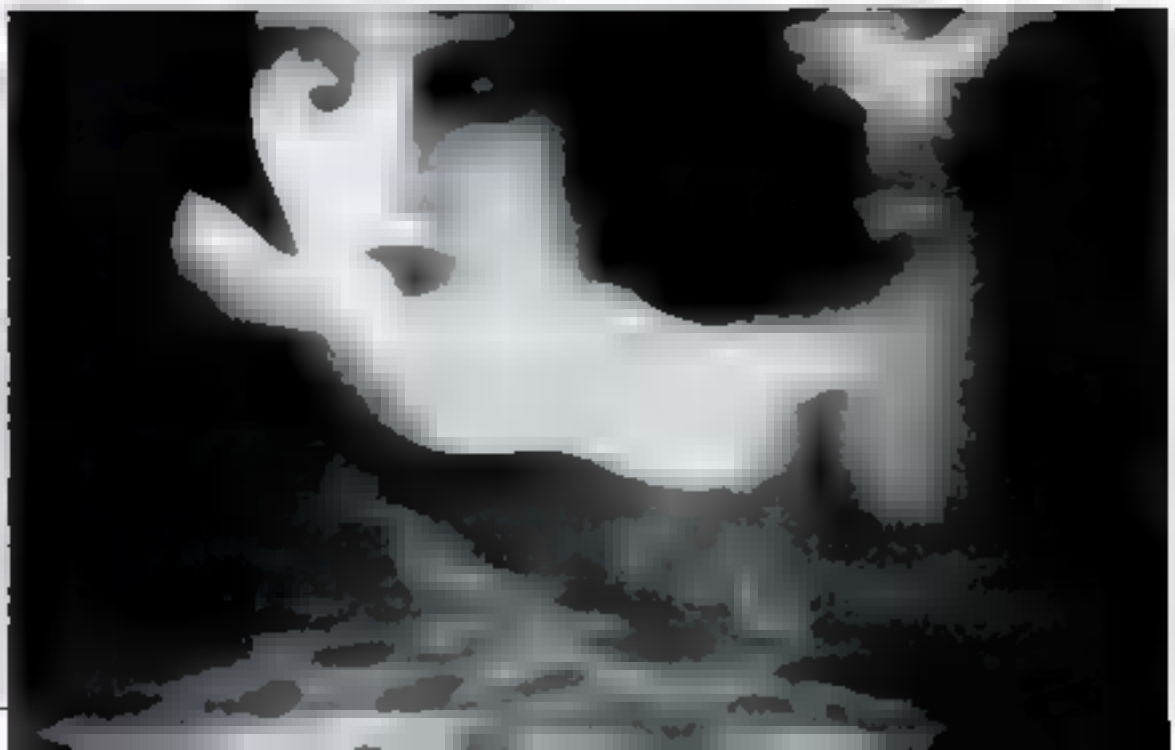


FANGS A LOT

He may not look like the classic vampire we've all come to know and loathe — dressed in dramatic evening wear, with wicked-beak face and pasty complexion — but the minute he opens his mouth you know this cue ball is a creature of the night. If he looks grumpy, it may be because someone was interrupting his midnight snack!

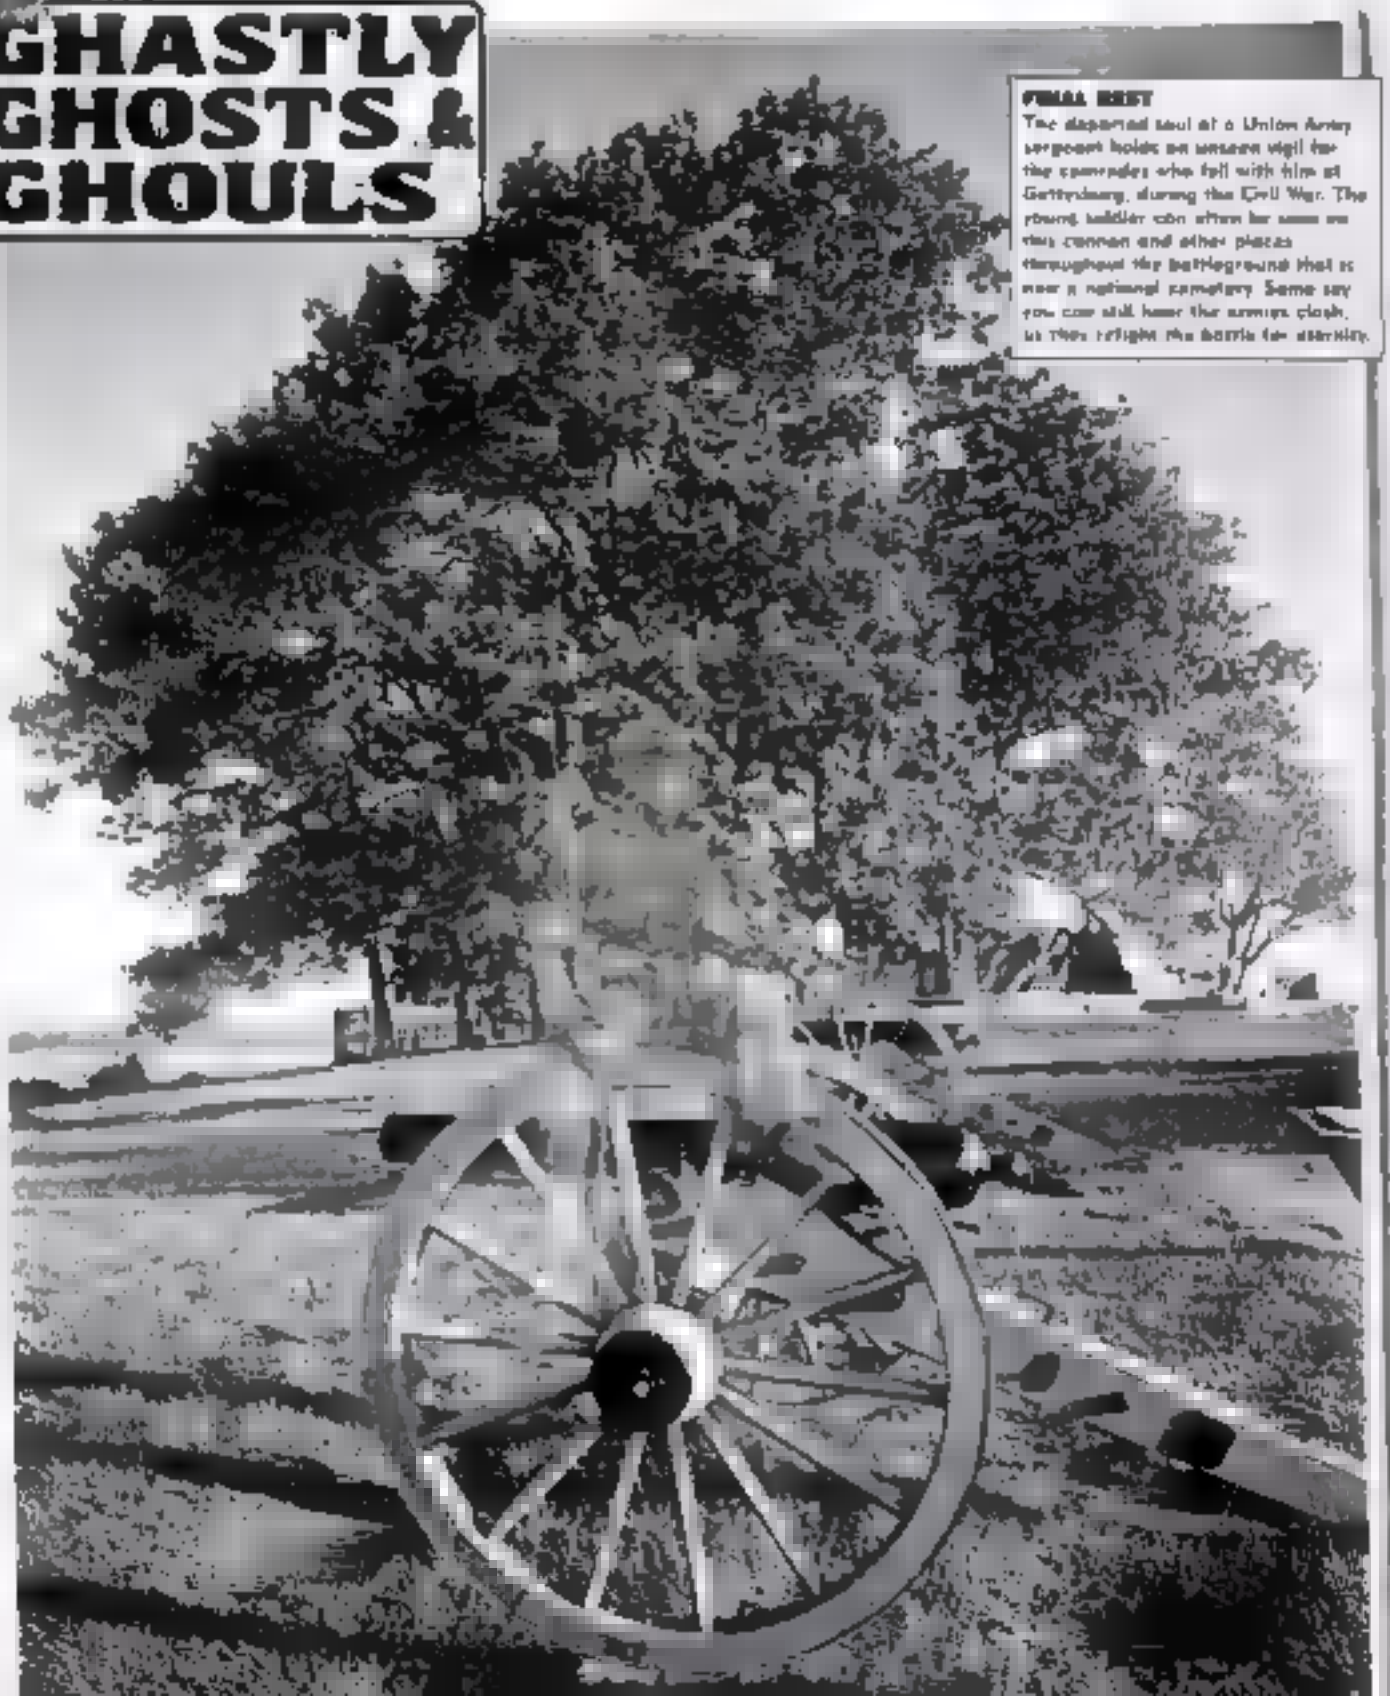


GHOSTLY GRASPS
The dead rise to take care of business, and sometimes their exploits can be recorded with highly sophisticated photographic equipment. Researchers were pleasantly surprised at the clarity of this image, which was captured on film easily with materializing over the grave of a businessman from a nearby estate who died in 1898. The results were shocked into the ground, and has not been seen since. Censorship, perhaps.



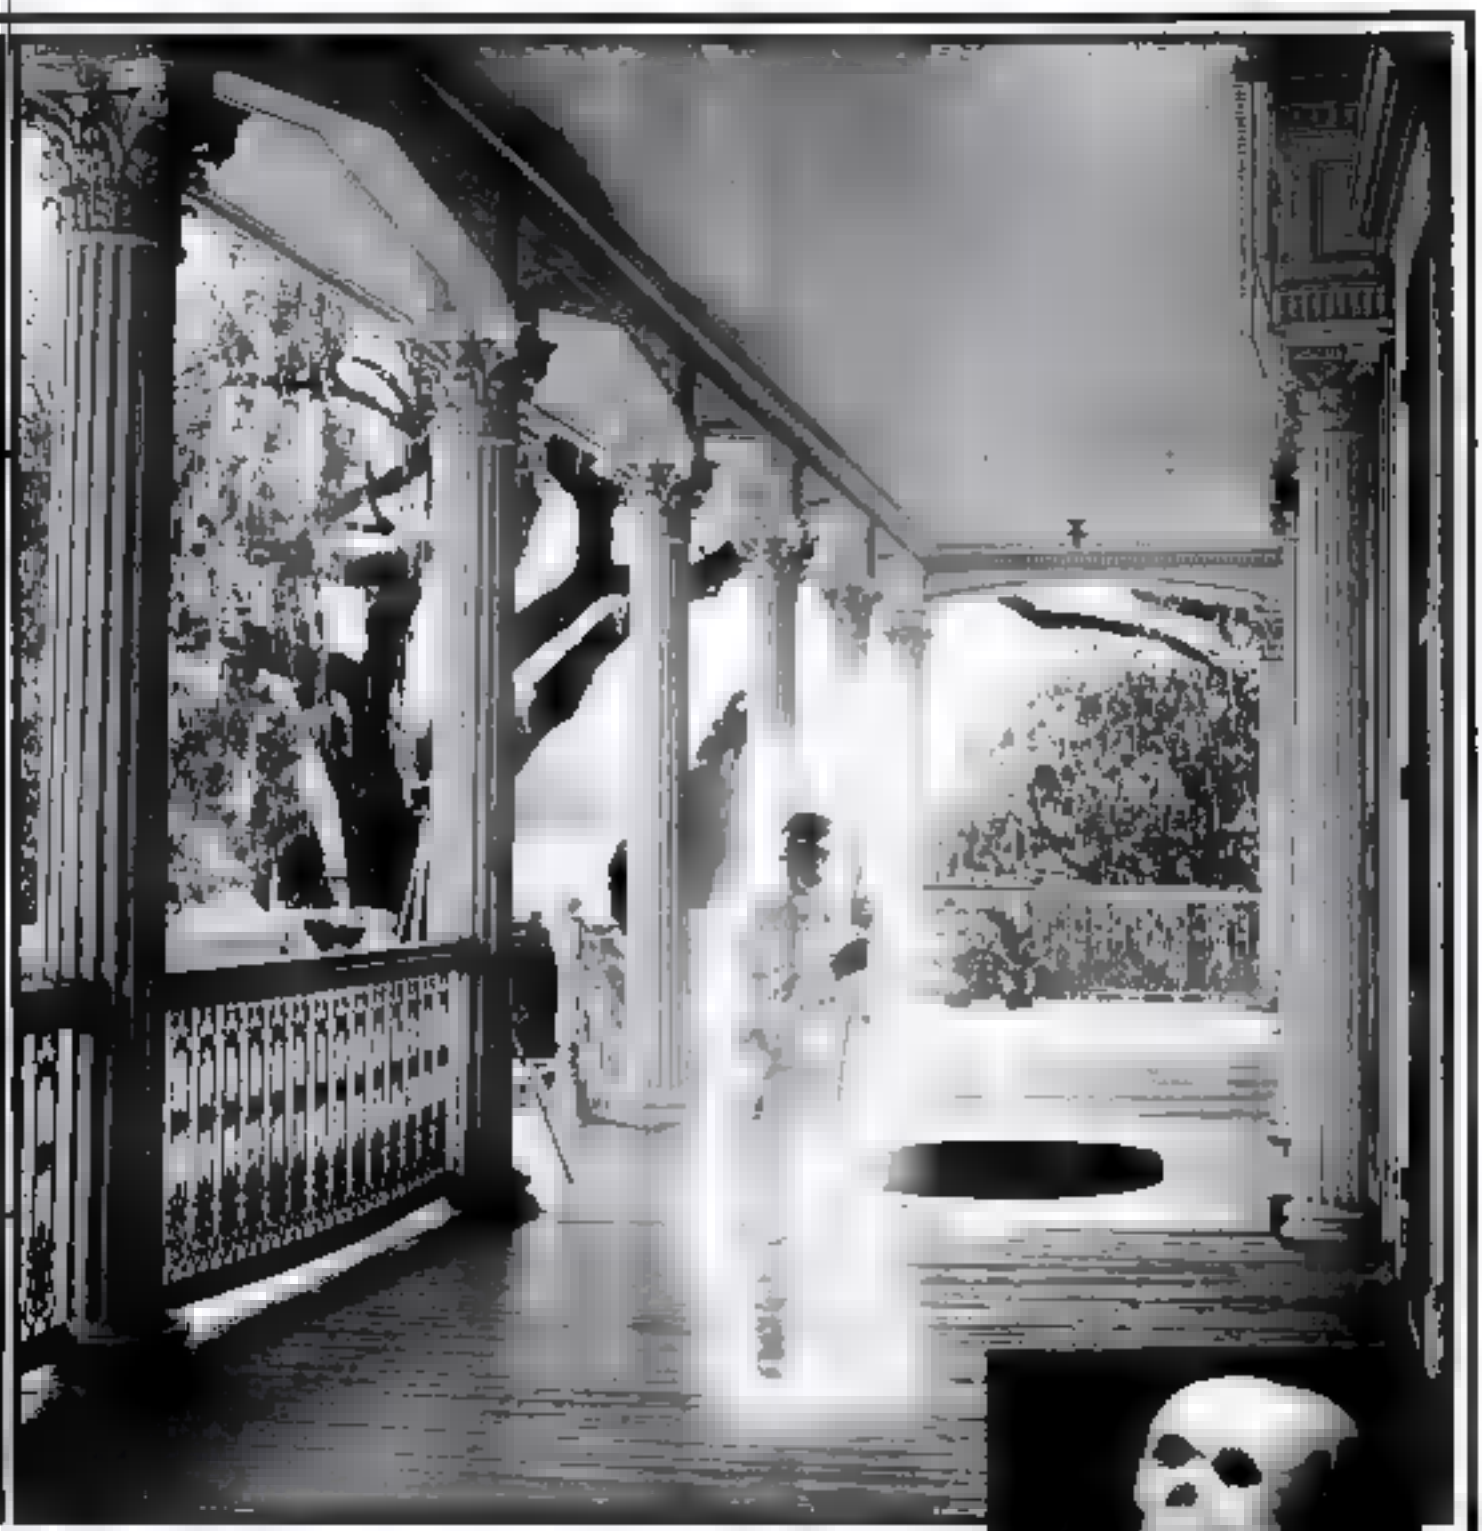
SUPERNATURAL NYMPH
This eerily beautiful apparition is often seen gliding through a Louisiana high school's swimming pool. Folklore claims she's the spirit of a young girl who went off to Hollywood in the 1920s to make her fortune as a Tinseltown bathing beauty. Her hopeful young life was cut short by an ill-fated romance with a no-good ladies' man, and now she's returned home to start over. The tale has many adherents, but others insist it's all wet.

GHASTLY GHOSTS & GHOULS



FINAL REST

The departed soul of a Union Army sergeant holds an unseen vigil for the comrades who fell with him at Gettysburg, during the Civil War. The young soldier can often be seen on this cannon and other places throughout the battleground that is now a national cemetery. Some say you can still hear the armies clash, as they refight the battle for eternity.



SOUTHERN GOTHIC

There's nothing like an old plantation for tragic tales of doomed romance, and this one is a doozy. A tourist snapped this photo after touring the aging mansion, and thought she was getting a ghostly remembrance of the genteel home — but what she got instead almost made her drop her digital camera when she checked the screen! The locals say this is the spirit of a Union soldier who made the mistake of falling in love with the daughter of the wealthy plantation owner, who was reviled for his hatred of "those dirty Yankees." He killed the soldier and locked his daughter in the attic

GHASTLY GHOSTS & GHOULS

HAUNTED MANOR

More ghostly tales come from this Victorian mansion that hasn't been occupied in decades — at least, not for many days you might get a long glimpse as these people come from hidden cameras set up in the house by researchers who wanted to get to the bottom of the haunting history.

DEATH WATCH

Researchers dressed in Victorian garb to make the ghosts feel as comfortable as possible. But maybe the spirits felt a little too comfortable. This associate barely escaped the sharp knife being hurled toward the back of her head by an unseen hand.

MUSIC IN THE AIR
An eerie melody drifted through the mansion and led researchers to this deserted duet for piano and violin. Whoever's pounding out the tune on piano can not only read sheet music — but may be wearing a sheet as well!

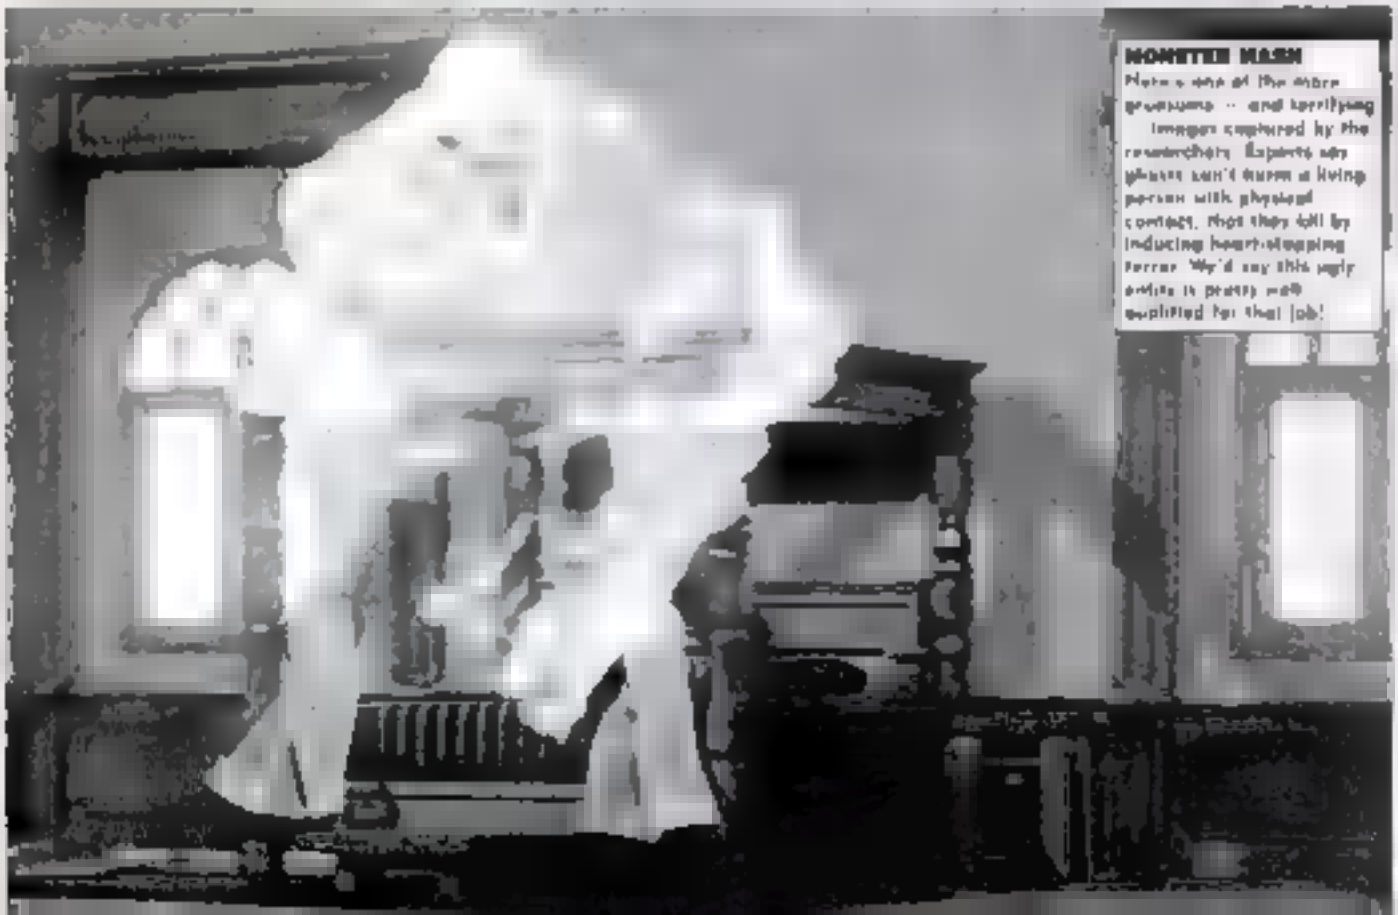
OLD NEWS IS GOOD NEWS
Once you get in the habit of enjoying a cigar and the newspaper every afternoon, it's a tough habit to break — even if you're dead! We know one spirit that doesn't have to bother with "The obituaries!"

BEWITCHING BRIDE
This haunting photo shows the spirit of a young bride as she tries to speak to a member of the research team. No word if they knew what she was

GHASTLY GHOSTS & GHOULS

FREE SPIRIT

Victorian times were pretty straitlaced, and no one ever got to just cut loose. Local lore claims the family who last lived in the house had a rebellious daughter who stayed out all night and scandalized her proper parents with all sorts of wild behavior. Looks like the young lady has finally found freedom in death!



MONSTER MASH

Here's one of the more gruesome -- and terrifying -- images captured by the researchers. Experts say ghosts can't harm a living person with physical contact, they say, but by inducing heart-stopping terror. We'd say this ugly entity is pretty well equipped for that job!

TODDLER TERROR
Don't worry about the little girl in the photo. Moments after it was snapped, the terrified tot was rescued by frantic family members. This is one witch who won't be going back to her gingerbread house anytime soon!

DEAD MAN WALKING
This heart-stopping photo was taken from the security camera at a hospital morgue, as you can tell by the date stamp in the upper-left corner. It captures the soul at the exact minute dead body lies on the autopsy table, waiting to be cut open so doctors can learn the cause of death. The really shocking part is that this sort of thing doesn't happen more often in morgues, with all these souls hanging around waiting to be released!

COULD IT BE . . . SATAN?
No, it's just one of his minions. Unlike God, Satan can't be everywhere. So he has a full staff of demonic representatives standing in for him. And the way things have been going for us humans lately, it looks like Hell is WAY

HANGING AROUND
See the shadow of the body hanging from the gnarled old tree? Legend has it that that's the ghost of a notorious Western outlaw who was hanged at high noon almost 150 years ago. They say that each year on the anniversary of his execution, the dead outlaw returns to haunt his old gallows. That's what we call "getting into the swing of things"!

ARMY OF THE DAMNED
Coalition commanders in Iraq may soon be unleashing some very special forces on the insurgents who've been blowing themselves up and taking everyone else with them. This soldier of freedom looks ready to escort the enemy back to a special place. Hell!

HOME AGAIN

One theory of Heaven is that you get to spend eternity in the place you love best, and maybe these two souls are doing just that.

Above is the famous Nat Love, an African-American cowboy who called himself Deadwood Dick in honor of his roping talents.

At left is a Union soldier bearing the tattered flag he protected in countless battles of the Civil War.

Both spirits somehow made it into photos snapped by tourists visiting the remains of the two historic sites — a Western ghost town, above, and an old family farm, at left.

Welcome home, folks!

CALL IT COURAGE Utter devastation (inset) is a way of life for the gutsy residents of Nita Okisakura, who refuse to give up and instead doggedly keep rebuilding

By MICHAEL CHIRON

OUTSIDERS say the Japanese town of Okisakura is cursed because it's been visited by virtually every form of disaster known to man — including earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, typhoons, tsunamis, wildfires, epidemics, tornadoes, mud slides and even a plague of locusts!

The death toll from the catastrophes has whittled down the town's population from roughly 12 million 290 to just 283 souls today.

But incredibly the plucky residents of the disaster-prone town refuse to give up — and at more than two years of destruction and havoc, not a single citizen has ever moved away.

"People call us earthquakers or worse and think that the last time we had a disaster was the last time," a Nita Okisakura police officer said. "But the truth is we have a disaster practically every week. Usually it's only a minor quake or a typhoon, but we're always ready. Maybe it's the Japanese

TOWN FEELS THE WRATH OF GOD

PLUCKY disaster victims have learned to grin and bear it through decades of calamity pulverize into pulpy rubble and turn X-ray technician.

"Shizukuishi has really had more than its share of bad luck," confides Japanese businessman Ichiro Takahashi. "In the 1890s, the town's crops were completely destroyed by locusts — a most unheard of in Japan.

"Most people decided to flee the disturbing tenure.

Remarkably, although the town has been buffeted by the worst Mother Nature has to offer, its hearty residents refuse to leave. Instead, they've rebuilt their beloved home.

"After the town's fire, we found among the rubble," recalls 72-year-old barber Ikuro Sato, "some people actually talked about moving, but we're here and nothing is ever changing.

"But then, we did what we always do. We pulled up our sleeves and started helping our neighbors rebuild their homes."

But town optimism can't stop nature's fury.

"Nothing like this ever happened. There's no curse," Mayor Watanabe insists. "We're just not a run of good luck."

Residents even have a sense of humor about the blows fate has dealt them.

DIETING AMERICANS CLOGGING RIVERS WITH FAT

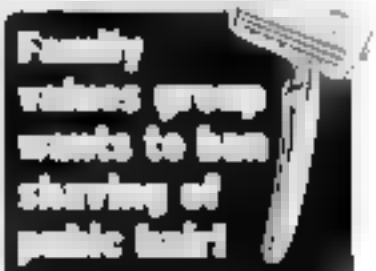
FEDERAL agencies say so many flabby Americans are dieting that there is a very real danger our rivers will become clogged with gravy, oily fat, killing fish and disrupting commerce.

"Americans should be dieting in a rotation to avoid clogging our rivers and inland waters," the Environmental Protection Agency and Office of the Surgeon General said in an unprecedented joint memo to President Bush.

"The logistics could be handled by a central agency such as the Department of Health and Human Services or the Centers for Disease Control."

No word yet on how the president will respond to suggestions that people with even-numbered birth dates should diet on even-numbered days while people with odd-numbered birth dates do just the opposite.

But an over zealous administration official puts it, "With 170 million fat Americans desperately needing to lose weight, rotation dieting isn't just something we ought to do, it's something we have to do. Otherwise our rivers and inland waters are going to thicken up and start looking like clam chowder."



Family values group wants to ban shaving of pubic hair

A FAMILY VALUES group has come up with a hairy new proposal. It wants to ban women from shaving off their pubic hair. The Family First Council is pushing Alabama legislators to put an end to the trend, claiming that it begins young pre-starlets and swingers and harms children. "It's disgusting and unnatural," argues the Rev. Samuel Patterson. "This practice is designed to make women look like prepubescent girls and can only encourage child abuse.

COMPUTER GEEK'S GOT A SIX-PACK . . . on the back of his hands!

A 43-YEAR-OLD nerd spends so much time typing away on his computer that crippling muscles have popped out on the backs of his hands.

Geeky Fred Newman has even come up with a name for his "ripped" new look — he calls it his "nerd's six-pack."

"Bodybuilders pump iron to develop six-pack abs in their stomachs, and I 'pumped key' at my computer to develop six-pack muscles in my hands," explains the internet

A doctor who has seen the protruding, prodigy muscles describes them as "most unusual, indeed."

SPACE ALIEN POSSE ROUNDS UP BAD GUYS

By TED CANNADY

SPACE ALIENS have taken over law enforcement in parts of the West, and cops who usually condemn vigilante justice say they're grateful for the help.

A flurry of recent reports describe how beautiful female humanoids backed by robot deputies have shot down drug dealers, would-be rapists and other undesirables in Wyoming, Montana, Colorado and New Mexico.

The lady aliens are said to wear buckskins, carry guns and otherwise look like cowgirls in the Wild West. The only difference is that they aren't constricted by the laws of physics.

Bowel-shaken cops say the extraterrestrial vigilantes materialize out of thin air at the scenes of crimes, zero in on the bad guys — and then blow them away.

"Those women don't talk or argue," says one senior police officer in Ballajell, Mont.

"They shoot first and ask questions later."

The FBI estimates that in the past three months at least 23 known or suspected criminals have been gunned down in cold blood, but the actual number could be higher because killings in remote areas may be going unreported.

One Colorado rancher says she was awakened in the middle of the night by a masked man trying to break through her bedroom window.

"He had a butcher knife and he was almost inside the house when I heard Bang! Bang! Bang!" says the 37-year-old woman.

"I got up and saw the man lying dead on the ground outside my window. Just a short wave off a cliff, pretty young woman blew smoke away from the end of her revolver and gave me a wave.

"There was something that looked like a big bug flapping

The Psychic Sabak Sisters

AMERICA'S SCREAMIN' SEERS

Let Serena and Sonya help you! Write: Sabaks, Weekly World News, P.O. Box 3036, Boca Raton, Fla. 33431-0936. We'll forward your letters to them. Don't send money. Their advice is free.

DOUBLE FEATURE

Has my daughter become a hooker?

DEAR SONYA: I have no idea what my daughter does for money and how she makes a living. She moved out of the state when she was 18 and whenever I ask her about her job, she hurriedly changes the subject and never, ever answers the question. She's only 22, and this makes me think the worst has happened to my baby. Is she doing something illegal? She never went to college and she has no skills that I know of, so I'm worried that she might be getting herself into serious trouble. — Concerned Mom in Indianapolis

Dear Concerned Mom: Your daughter changes the subject because she wants to surprise you in June with some very good news. I don't want to give too much away, but this should ease your mind. Think brilliant young doctor and a rock the size of a marble. Have fun at the wedding!

Dear Serena: Please don't think I'm crazy but something inside of me is screaming and crying to get out — and I don't know what it is. Sometimes I feel so restless and uncomfortable that I wonder if I can stand it anymore. And I feel so fragmented and torn that I've never been able to get on track and figure out what I want to do with my life. I'm just 21, Serena. But if I can't figure out what's wrong with me soon, I think I'll go insane. — Anxious in Omaha

Dear Anxious: The "something" inside of you is the spirit of your twin brother who died in childbirth. Meditate on your situation daily and listen carefully to what that little voice in your head is trying to say. By harnessing the power of your twin's life force you will become most powerful and successful indeed. I see a brilliant future for you as a singer-songwriter — with you doing the singing and your twin's spirit doing the writing!

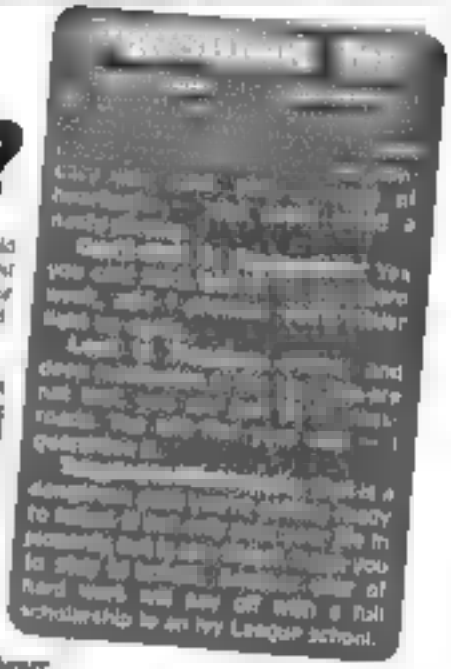
Dear Serena: Several years ago I had much with a childhood friend and I really would like to find him again. His name is Richard. The last I heard of him he was in Chicago, our hometown. What's happened to him? Can you help me find him? — Anxious in Atlantic City

Dear Anxious: Richard died during open-heart surgery in 2002 but he snapped back to life in a morgue three days later — and he's back preaching the gospel in tent revivals and churches coast to coast ever since. I know that comes as a shock because he used to be a hard-core atheist. You can get his telephone number by calling directory assistance in Waco, Texas. He'll be tickled pink to hear from you.



SIZZLING Rebecca Sandbo-Sequoia, who was the curly bloomer at Berkeley High School in Berkeley, Calif., was nicknamed the Jolly Blonde Giant by classmates.

Will I ever make it as a megastar in Hollywood?

DEAR SERENA: I'm a struggling actress in Hollywood and I've been living hand to mouth for almost a year now. The thing is, I came here to become a big star and I don't [redacted] to leave until I make my dreams come true. All I want is one chance to audition in front of a big-name producer or director and show him what I can do. I never took any classes in acting, but it's in my blood — and I know I can be great. Can you look into your crystal ball and tell me if I'll ever get my big break? And if I am destined to get a break, how can I speed things up? — Desperate in Hollywood

Dear Desperate: Your big [redacted] has been staring you in the face for six months, dear but you have yet to open your eyes to see it. The young filmmaker you chat with at the library every day — but aren't taking seriously — is set to become Hollywood's next Steven Spielberg. He'll make you a star if you'll get your head out of the clouds and REALLY TALK to him. By the way — that lottery ticket you bought last week and forgot about is a BIG winner. Check your purse. I know that in the jackpot will come in handy.

Dear Serena: My boyfriend has been pressuring me to break my pledge to remain a virgin and make love to him before we get married. I've refused so far. At first he was just pushing me to do it, but now he tells me his doctor has just told him that he's got terminal cancer. He says if we don't make love immediately he'll soon be too weak to do it and then he'll die without ever having experienced the ultimate expression of our love — intercourse. I'm very confused. Do I owe it to him to be really romantic and give in? — Feeling Pressured in New Brunswick

Dear Feeling Pressured: The dude is lying through his teeth to you about the cancer and he might be ashamed of himself if he knew how my trusty Ouija board puts it: "Mom . . . nice guy but need . . . take . . . matters in own hand till marriage bells ring." I hope I don't have to paint you a clearer picture.

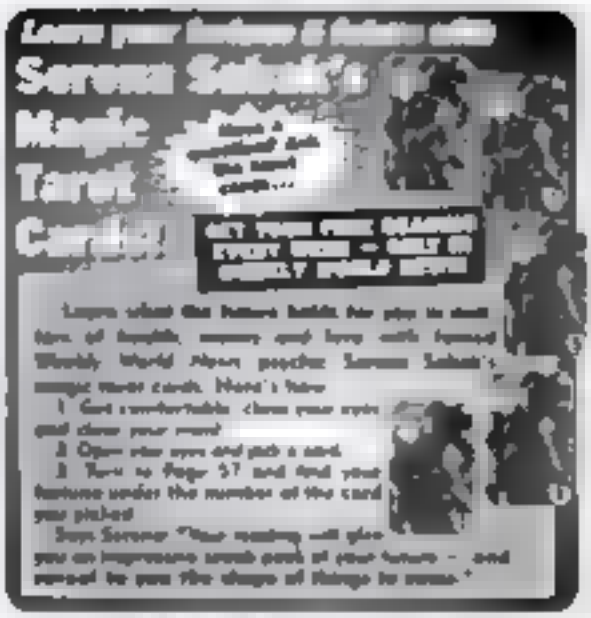
Dear Serena: I've been married for two years to a wonderful woman and we're very happy together. It's difficult to imagine that we'll ever have any problems. But I've been reading about how many marriages end in divorce these days, and I'm getting worried. Is there any way I can be sure that we'll stay together? — Nervous Newlywed in Nashville

Dear Nervous: Only you can answer that question. Your marriage will be as strong as you and your wife want it to be. Remember, you never know what might happen. Can you tell me if our marriage will last — or if it's going to shatter in heartbreak? And if it is going down the tubes, when? — Wondering in Taylorville

Dear Wondering: You can expect to enjoy a lifelong marriage with your wife IF you can overcome the urge to divorce when you hit that rough spot — you catching her doing the snake dance with an old boyfriend next year and also in 2006, when you



Why does every man I meet turn out to be a frog?

Dear Serena: Every time I feel what I think is a good man he turns out to be a rat, liar or a thief or an alcoholic or a bum. And don't think I attract that kind of guy because I'm some kind of low-life. I'm a decent Christian and CEO of my own interior design firm. Will I ever find Mr. Right? — Lonely Lady in Virginia Beach

Dear Lonely Lady: You won't find Mr. Right, darlene, he'll find you! Expect to meet — tomorrow, his name is either Frederick and Frankie — next week while standing in line at the supermarket. He'll strike up a conversation about that big-a-tisement scrapbook I'm an read up on her. Five weeks an you'll have something to say. I see a whirlwind romance and — get this — a wedding in July!

Where is my winning lotto ticket?

Dear Serena: Oh my goodness — please help me! I won the lottery last week with numbers you gave to me — a giant $1 million jackpot! But the ticket disappeared and I can't find it anywhere! Serena, help! Where's the ticket? — Frannie in Cedar Key

Dear Frannie: When I gave you those winning numbers I warned you about leaving the ticket on the coffee table where the dog could get it. Fortunately, he swallowed it whole. You can appreciate it from that pile he deposited beside the oak tree in the north west corner of your backyard. Hint: plant

Help me pay my light bill!

Dear Serena: I had some unexpected bills this month and now I can't pay my light bill. Please help me with a magic spell to bring me money. I'm not greedy. And I didn't blow all my dough on booze or living high on the hog. I just had a little run of bad luck. That's all. — Needy Money in Montgomery

Dear Needy Money: You don't have to tell me you're not a spendthrift — my crystal ball knows all and tells all. Please accept the fruits of my spell of Financial Good Fortune, dear. The $5 000 check you receive in the mail next week will pay your $112 electricity bill with $2,888 left over for other things — take that new swimsuit and cute sun dress you've had your eye on

ORIENT 2 3 4 5 6 7

What's your secret message from the fortune cookie this week? It's easy and fun to decipher. Here's the key to decoding your message:

If the number of letters in your first name is 5 or less, subtract that number from 7. If there are more than 5 letters in your first name, subtract the total from 13.

Now take the result and find your letter in the word ORIENT above. Then, starting at the upper left corner of the box at left, check each one of your two letters as it appears from left to right. The letters form a word of 5 to 7 letters. Check your horoscope for the day that corresponds to that word.

DEAD OR ALIVE?

These stars achieved fame and fortune in movies and on the stage, but it looks like some of them have taken their last curtain call. Who's living — and who's taking a permanent powder? (Answers below.)

Crime paid off big for the gang of grifters, drifters and thieves who filled the screen in The Sting (1973), the rollicking Depression-era tale of two men who quit The Big Con against a steel-hearted crook in order to avenge one of their pals. The Oscar-winning movie was almost as memorable for its soundtrack, filled with such classic ragtime tunes as "The Entertainer." The movie reunited the dream team of Paul Newman and Robert Redford, whose earlier buddy film, Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, is remembered even more fondly than this one. Mate photo, from left: Newman (HENRY GONDORFF). Redford (JOHNNY HOOKER) and Robert Shaw (crime boss DOYLE LONNEGAN). Inset photos, from left: Charles Durning (LT. SNYDER) and Ray Walston (J.J. SINGLETON).

WHAT YOU THINK IS TRUE TODAY . . .

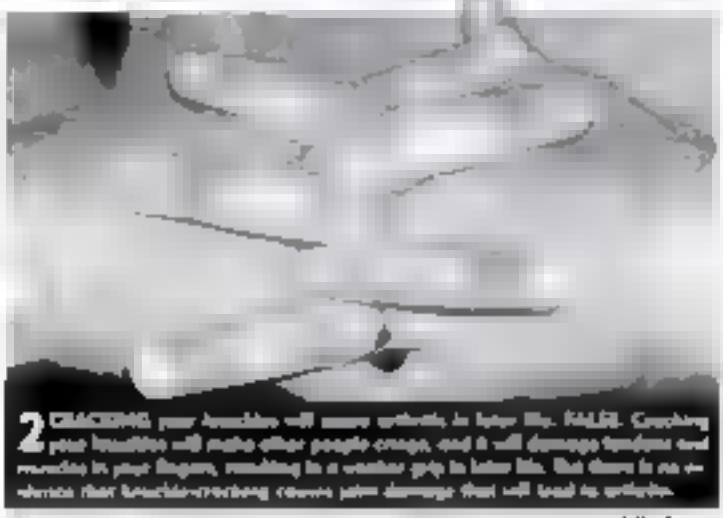
20 TOP MEDICAL

By ANNIE VAN HORN
Contributing Editor

MILLIONS of otherwise sane and sensible Americans believe [illegible] medical myths that make them sound stupid when they're chatting with doctors — and can even damage their health.

Here are 20 common medical beliefs, some true and some false, from the American Association of Medical Practitioners, [illegible] and Assistants, a Washington-based lobbying group.

Read on to find out how [illegible] ignorant — or how health savvy — YOU are.



1 It takes seven years for chewing gum to pass through your digestive system. FALSE. Gum is indigestible and can stick to the colon and may take a month or two to pass but experts agree that seven years is pushing it.

2 Cracking your knuckles will cause arthritis, or bone fits. FALSE. Cracking your knuckles will make other people cringe, and it will damage tendons and muscles in your fingers, resulting in a weaker grip in later life. But there is no evidence that knuckle-cracking causes joint damage that will lead to arthritis.

3 Cutting salt intake can help your high blood pressure. TRUE. Even a small [illegible] sodium chloride — [illegible] menu of hypertensives. It makes the heart's job easier by releasing some of the water that will make[illegible]

4 Mating at the wax will not blind you. TRUE. You can try it yourself, or you can take the advice of medical experts and[illegible] lash away from the sun.

5 Going out in frigid weather with wet hair from a shower can give you a cold or the flu. TRUE. Cold weather [illegible] the ultimate invaders and wet hair tricks the body into thinking it's even chillier than it is. This opens the door to attack from bugs and viruses that can make you sick as a dog.

6 You can catch a sexually transmitted disease from a toilet seat. TRUE. Be picky about whom you follow into a stall. You can also catch STDs from vinyl car seats if the owner spends a lot of time on Lover's Lane.

7 Feeding kids sugar will make them hyperactive. TRUE. And the more [illegible] give them, the more hyperactive they'll become. Teach your kids to crave meaty treats like leftover steak and chops. [illegible] no sugar in meat, so they'll be calmer.

8 Drinking warm milk will put you to sleep. FALSE — unless you splash a little scotch in it. While milk does contain the soothing amino acid L-tryptophan. But you'll have to drink six or eight GALLONS of sweet whole [illegible] to get enough L-tryptophan to relax you. [illegible] if you're already up and pacing.

9 Chocolate causes ugly pimples and blackheads. TRUE. It also makes you fat.

10 Cats will suck the breath out of babies, killing them in their cribs. TRUE, but rare.

11 Most women secretly wish they were men. TRUE. Studies show that six in 10 gals wish they were guys, at least for a few days.

12 Diabetes is caused by high consumption of sugar. FALSE. Most doctors now agree that diabetes is a genetic illness in-

14 All doctors are qualified to give good medical care and have passed rigorous tests to prove [illegible] New Guinea, Borneo and Sarawak — or they're rich kids who paid somebody off to get certified, a shocking new study confirms.

15 Fewer than half of all women can experience sexual ecstasy via orgasm. FALSE. New studies show eight to 10 women regularly experience stunning, earth-shaking orgasms, especially when going solo.

16 The size of a man's penis doesn't matter to a woman and has no bearing on her ability to enjoy sex. FALSE. Are you kidding?

17 Herbs and natural remedies don't cure cancer. FALSE. Dozens of herbs and natural remedies cure cancer — and researchers know it. But if they told you the truth they'd be out of a job.

18 Half of all Americans are obese. FALSE. A full two-thirds of Americans are obese. It's just that when pollsters call and ask them, a lot of people lie and say "I'm average," or "I'm just a couple of pounds overweight," and the pollster has no choice but to believe them.

19 [illegible] FALSE. Celibacy is the only [illegible] sex with [illegible] Earth that is [illegible] virtually [illegible] of the [illegible] diseases [illegible] out of office.

20 A woman can't get pregnant when she is having her menstrual period. TRUE — unless she engages in unprotected sex with a man.

Because sperm are tough. They can survive in a woman's body for up to five days in their frantic hunt for an egg. Even if she's shedding a prime egg via the miracle of ovulation, determined and savvy sperm can wait the situation out, find the next egg up [illegible] and make a cute little baby. And all it takes is one of the little troublemakers.

MEDICAL ADVISORY. Medical theories change rapidly and what's thought to be true today might very well be proven false tomorrow. You are strongly advised to consult a healthcare professional you know and trust before changing your diet, lifestyle or health habits in any way.

All your hard work could begin to pay off this week, so let 'er rip!

Keep your nose to yourself because someone is watching you.

Begin planning for a big trip now and make sure you have all your shots. You're going to need them.

A dream with sunshine, love jackets and your fourth-grade teacher may have special significance.

Use your skills with diplomacy.

Don't travel on Thursday if you can avoid it.

You may encounter some problems with a pesky lecher more attendant but they won't last long.

SAGITTARIUS

Nov. 22 – Dec. 21

Unleash your tongue this week.

Your boss could shine you nuts with senseless demands and nonsense and you don't have to take it. Talking back will empower you.

Watch for flamingos, whether the real bird or just a garden ornament.

An attractive member of the opposite sex secretly has eyes for you — too bad they're married.

JUNE is busting out all over . . . and so is your brand-new horoscope!

As you wave goodbye to spring, this stunning chart will predict the new and exciting events that will unfold in your life between now and June 15.

Ever since star charts were first written, astrologers have regarded the four weeks from mid-May to mid-June among the most important in the zodiac calendar, since this vital time lays the foundations of the dramatic happenings that will occur throughout the coming year.

With this in mind, WWN's team of top astrologers compiled these charts with special care, especially in the vital areas of [illegible], MONEY and HEALTH.

The team's consultant, our own Sonya Sabak, says: "I've always considered the horoscope on the following [illegible] to be of supreme importance, a time of building [illegible] future.

"Not only does your chart indicate what the [illegible] have in store for you over the next four [illegible], it also influences what will happen to you [illegible] your loved ones during the coming year.

ARE YOU bored with your sex life, Rams (Aries)? Although an invitation to join a swinging singles club that arrives around the time of the new moon on May 17 sounds like fun, your stars say you'll regret it if you join. Take the advice of a woman with a hairy chin who lives in your neighborhood instead, and you can spice up your love life without drastic — and dangerous — activities.

Single Rams meet someone with a lot of sex appeal and even more cash while browsing in a gourmet grocery store produce section on June 1.

You overhear some interesting [illegible] at a friend's wedding after June 14.

BAG$ O' BUCK$

An unattractively skinny Woman with the gift of gab talks your ear off on May 20 and you'll be tempted to tune out her prattling, but the information is extremely important. Just be nice, don't make any sudden moves and pretend you're [illegible] to be sure to listen well.

Beware of insurance [illegible] strangers on June 7, when [illegible] to double. A [illegible] offer [illegible] good deal, but [illegible] or [illegible] 21, when [illegible] Each would play a naughty trick!

VIM AND VIGOR

DREAMING of your incredible water-skiing prowess during an afternoon nap late in May will not translate into skill on the skis in real life — and you risk injury if you actually attempt the crazy stunts you dreamed up. Stick to safer sports like swimming and tennis.

Some Rams need a boost of protein on May 29 — try hard-boiled eggs or lean meats such as turkey breast.

Although advice about improving your appearance on June 9 could hurt your feelings, it's [illegible] worth taking.

If you've been [illegible] about jogging as a regular [illegible] go [illegible] it, but take it easy at first.

Married Twins could argue over chores during moody Mercury's visit June 5 — although dumping a plate of spaghetti on your mate's head is tempting at the time, this will only make matters worse. You'll only end up arguing even more about who has to clean up the mess!

Some Crabs get a big fat pay raise on May 28, but don't spend it all in one place, because you could face an unexpected expense linked to an incident that takes place at a party June 4.

Insurance advice you get from a man wearing a cap with a built-in fan June 12 borders on the fraudulent and is best avoided.

You'll learn about it after an incident involving your car and a grocery cart — unfortunately one being pushed by a little old lady at the time — on May 30.

All's well that ends well, and your cash flow improves after June 7. But Uranus retrograde June 13 could cause mix-ups — It's NOT a good day to make anything other than very tentative plans.

HOW TO MAKE

DOLLARS FROM HEAVEN
Stop spending all your time chasing money when you

MONEY makes the world go round, and you can always use more, right?

Sure, it doesn't buy happiness — but the stuff you can do with a fistful of greenbacks can bring a lot of fun into your life. And without money on hand, misery's lurking right around the corner, waiting to pounce.

Unfortunately simply wanting more moolah doesn't guarantee you'll get it – you need to take steps to attract cash.

It's easy, if you understand the principles of prosperity. Money is energy. And if you make a space in your home for that energy to enter, money will be knocking on your door in the blink of an eye.

Like attracts like. By making your home feel more prosperous, you're making cash more likely to enter.

First you must invite money in by clearing some space for the new. Start by throwing out, or selling at a yard sale, as much of your old junk as you can bear to part with.

Clear out your clutter, and the empty space will be there waiting for something exciting – something you purchase with money – to fill it.

Yes, this is an act of faith, and your mind may start to play tricks on you while you're de-junking. You may wish to cling to your old possessions as if you're clinging to your past.

Fears of never being able to replace what you're chucking can make you mighty nervous, but now more than ever is the time to trust in the universe to deliver what you need.

Just remember: if in doubt, throw it out! Even that hideous ceramic sculpture Aunt Mabel gave you for your birthday — everything goes.

Second, greet your home with fragrance that symbolises wealth — sweet orange and lemon are more likely to attract cash than sweaty socks, cat litter and other disagreeable odors.

Next, place some silver, gold and copper around your home. It needn't be real — an inexpensive can of spray paint will transform just about anything in your home, even the kitchen waste-basket!

Put the silver, gold and copper in the south-east corner of your home, the area of wealth. Place a silver, gold or copper object on your desk, on your computer or even a painting on black velvet, and the transformation of your home from poverty-stricken to prosperous will almost be complete.

Finally, use the long and trick of attracting abundance by placing champagne and caviar in your fridge, even if you prefer beer and pretzels to bubbly and fish eggs. You don't have to eat it — it just needs to be there.

Now that your home is clutter-free, smells good and looks good, hang a picture of what you hope to do with your newfound wealth in a silver or gold frame just inside your front door.

Whether you're hoping for a bass boat, a boob enlargement or a Porsche Turbo, put up a photo of your dream.

Tape the largest bill you can afford to the back of the picture, and the bill will work its powerful magnetism, drawing cash to your door.

If you're in a big hurry, and truly need cash NOW, do this. Take a large chunk of your savings and blow it on a luxury, either for yourself or to give as a gift.

Sure, that takes guts, but if you get something fabulous, use it and enjoy it without guilt. Universal laws of prosperity will return your expenditure [illegible] a week.

If you absolutely, positively believe, this is guaranteed to work wonders for your bank account.

But [illegible] is warning [illegible] is the enemy of greenbacks. Trying to get more than your share, or waiting cash just so you can hoard it like a penny-pinching miser, is a sure way to ensure money turns and runs the other way.

Always remember: Generosity attracts, and stinginess repels. Have a kind and generous heart, and you'll have plenty of cash to spend and some to spare, too.

HELL ON THE SCREAMING

ON AN UNCHARTED ISLAND in the Philippine Sea, there lies an estimated $200 million in treasure buried by English pirates in 1687. But be warned: Scores of men have searched for the hoard of gold — only to leave their bones on the beach. Experts believe the deaths were caused by poisonous gases seeping out of the island's volcano. But Scottish treasure hunter Lance MacArthur, who tried to find the hidden trove, insists the Curse of the Screaming Virgins killed the victims — including his seven companions. Here is his chilling account:

I RAN like a frightened child through the dense jungle, dodging deadly gas clouds and slashing frantically at vines that hemmed me in on all sides.

The 13 evil harpies were right on my heels, greedily extending their talons. Some slithered on their bellies like snakes, others scuttled through the treetops — all with seaweed-like hair, mottled gray skin and soulless eyes burning with hatred.

Worst of all was their mind-shattering, high-pitched screech, like ravenous birds of prey.

I soon found myself surrounded by the zombie-like she-devils.

The Screaming Virgins who had butchered my seven comrades now gloated in triumph as they lurched forward to rip me limb from limb.

"No, please!" I whimpered.

Just six hours before, my companions and I had been ecstatic as we dropped anchor. If the treasure map was legit, we'd soon be multi-millionaires.

Of course, we knew about the curse. The ghosts of the 13 Screaming Virgins who supposedly guarded the island.

Legend has it the young beauties were raped and murdered to keep the pirate treasure secret!

Legend has it the beauties had been on route to wed the king of Spain when their vessel was waylaid. They were raped, then murdered to keep the location of the pirates' gold secret.

But our leader Doc assured us the ghost story was poppycock.

"Gases can cause hallucinations," the Englishman said. "We'll put on gas masks if we run into trouble."

Our team included Tank, a former Navy SEAL who brought along his Mini, the Frenchman Lafitte, deadly with a throwing knife; Li, a martial arts master; Barrington, a good-natured Australian with an uncanny sense of direction; Portillo, the explosives expert; and myself.

Leaving our Filipino cabin boy to mind the ship, we climbed into a dinghy and rowed to shore.

The island lived up to its reputation. Ominous clouds rolled by and birds circling overhead squawked in warning.

"This place cursed," Li muttered.

We'd hacked our way through the jungle for an hour when Portillo started panting.

"That beautiful girl — and what breasts!" he exclaimed. He darted into the bushes.

"Stop, you fool!" Doc cried.

We chased Portillo and caught up with him minutes later — just in time to see his hair vanishing into quicksand.

"Damn, his pack and the gas masks," Tank said.

I caught a glimpse of a pale, smiling face retreating into the tendrils.

As we trekked on, a boulder came rolling down an embankment and slammed poor Li like an ant. This time, I swear I heard girlish titters.

Finally we reached a festering swamp at the foot of a skull-shaped hill.

Doc proclaimed, "Over that hill is a fortune that will make us rich beyond our ——"

He was interrupted by banshee-like screams. And out of the fog, those seven from Hell emerged, some holding their rotting breasts.

"Steady, men. These creatures are a figment of our imagination," Doc said.

"Are you sure?" I asked.

Doc turned his back on the she-these ladies are hallucinations or I am that the queen is British."

One of the ghost girls yanked back Doc's head and drew a long, yellow fingernail across his throat. Blood sprayed everywhere.

"I stand corrected," Doc gasped.

We all bolted.

As LaBlue ran, he whirled and hurled a knife at the Screaming Virgin at the head of the pack. It penetrated her skull four inches. She blithely pulled it out and licked the blood lovingly.

"Great. Now you've pissed her off," Harrington remarked.

When the monstrous maidens caught up with Tank, he opened fire with his M-16.

"Eat this," he roared.

Unfazed, the creatures pounced on him like ravenous wolves. He screamed in agony as kidneys, entrails and bloody flesh flew into the air. Tank had saved a bullet for himself.

One of the ghouls leapt from the trees onto LaBlue's back. She gripped his head with her thighs and gouged his eyes out with her numerous claws. Stumbling blindly, the Frenchman tumbled into a ravine and broke his neck.

Harrington and I dashed on.

"Which way?" I demanded.

The Australian smiled and headed into a cloud bank.

"Stick with me, mate," he yelled — then smacked right into a tree.

A sharp limb jutted from Harrington's back, his bloody heart on the tip.

But soon the Screaming Virgins had me cornered. I cringed, covering my ears from their din and steeling myself to be torn asunder.

Then I heard a familiar voice.

"This way, mate."

I turned to a cloud patch. "Harrington? B-b-but I saw you die," I sputtered.

"No time to be picky," the Aussie's ghost pointed out.

I took a huge breath and followed his voice. As I barreled through the gas cloud, one wraith caught up and sank her teeth into the back of my

Just when I thought my lungs would explode, I burst into a clearing. At my feet was a drop of 90 feet to the sea.

Desperate, I launched myself off the cliff.

Yes, I made it through the shark-infested water back to the boat.

The doctors say the Screaming Virgins weren't real. They claim the gases played tricks on my mind. When I showed them the bite mark, they told me it was probably self-inflicted.

When I tell this story in taverns, fortune hunters will often beg me to take them back to the island. Well, maybe someday I'll lead another expedition there — if you show me how
